U.S., England Set to Return Ruhr Firms To Germans

Coal, Iron, Steel Industries Will Go To New Companies; French Protest Action

Frankfort, Germany, Nov. 10 (AP).—British and American authorities announced today a vast reorganization plan under which the Ruhr's coal, iron and steel industries will revert to German ownership "in the near future."

The French protested almost immediately. They felt the decision would be a threat to French hopes for international control of the Ruhr.

In London diplomatic sources expressed concern that the French protest would retard the six-power conference for drafting an international control authority for the Ruhr. The conference opens in London Thursday with representatives from the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

[Officials in Washington emphasized that the new Ruhr authority being discussed by the London conference would deal only with the allocation of products and would not attempt to control the Ruhr industries themselves. The present job is to make detailed agreements in line with principles agreed upon in a six-power meeting last spring.—Editor's note.]

The British-American plan announced today affects all the coal, iron and steel industries in their ocupation zones.

The plan specifically bans from positions of ownership and control persons who "permitted and encouraged" the Nazi party. It also stipulates there will be no "excessive concentration of economic power."

One effect of the plan, British and American officials said, would be to break up the sprawling Krupp and Thyssen industrial kingdoms into smaller units under new ownership.

British Open New Field To U. S. Airlift Planes

Berlin, Nov. 10 (NYHT)—British Air Minister Arthur Henderson announced today that a new airfield at Celle, in the British zone of Germany, would be made available tto American C-54 airlift planes beginning December 15.

The new field, a few miles north of Hanover, will bring to four the number of airports from which American planes fly supplies to Berlin.

President Grows Whiskers Pending Missus' Arrival

Key West, Fla., Nov. 10 (AP).—President Truman appeared today with a vacation mustache stubble and chin whiskers.

He came upon newspapermen and photographers who were swimming in the officers' pool at this Marine base.

"What's that, a Van Dyke?" one asked.

"It's not a Van Dyke," the President replied grinning, "it's a Jeff Davis."

The President was taking one of his usual informal strolls about the base, wearing cotton trousers and a light blue sports shirt.

Beware "Ethical Infants"

Science Without Conscience Menaces Man, Bradley Says

The following is an excerpt from Gen. Omar Bradley's Armistice Day address in Boston yesterday:

With the monstrous weapons man already has, humanity is in danger of being trapped in this world by its moral adolescents. Our knowledge of science has clearly outstripped our capacity to control it. We have too many men of science; too few men of God. We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount. Man is stumbling blindly through a spiritual darkness while toying with the precarious secrets of life and death. The world has achieved brilliance without wisdom, power without conscience. Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about war than we know about peace, more about killing than we know about living.

This is our twentieth century's claim to distinction and to progress.

U.S. May Offer Reds 40-Year Treaty Again

Atlantic Pact Talks Emphasize Need for Security Guarantee

Post Reporter

American policy makers are considering a renewal of the offer first made by former Secretary James F. Byrnes, to guarantee Russia against German aggression.

The need for some kind of reassurance to Russia has become evident during the preliminary talks on the so-called Atlantic Treaty, which would link the United States and Canada in a defensive "association" with Britain, France and the Low Countries.

The chief purpose of the Atlantic pact would be, of course, to protect western Europe against a possible Soviet attack. But policy makers here see clearly that unless the treaty were drafted very carefully it might look to the Russians as if the West were getting ready to attack them.

Must Fill Four Requisites

In American eyes an Atlantic pact will have to meet four main requirements, as follows:

1. It will have to be wholly consistent with the United Nations Charter—especially with Article 51, which permits individual or collective self-defense against armed attack, and Article 52, which authorizes "regional arrangements" to maintain peace;

2. It cannot contain any automatic provision to go to war, for this would impair the constitutional right of Congress to declare war;

3. It must be strong enough to reassure the western Europeans, but

4. It must not look to the Russians like an offensive alliance against them or anyone else.

Offer Might Dispel Suspicions

Probably no draftsman could write a treaty that would not invite Soviet suspicions. But it is thought that suspicions might be dispelled somewhat if the treaty were accompanied by a renewal of Byrnes' famous 40-year offer, or something even broader.

The Byrnes treaty is still on the books as an American offer, although the Russians have rejected it repeatedly. Secretary Marshall brought it up at Moscow in the spring of 1947, but the Russians countered by wanting it completely rewritten to include political and economic as well as military provisions.

Something like the Byrnes proposal was signed by the United States and the western Europeans as part of their six-power London agreement of June 7 of this year on the future of western Germany. This agreement provided that the United States, Britain and France would consult if any of them saw a danger of resurgent German military power or of the adoption of aggressive policies by Germany.

Russians Unimpressed

The Russians were not a party to this agreement. They were not impressed by the few clauses aimed against future German aggression. On the contrary, they denounced the whole agreement as a violation of the Yalta and Potsdam accords, and promptly imposed the Berlin blockade as retaliation.

Still, the United States is ready to try again. If the Berlin question can be settled in Paris soon—and there was some hope in official quarters yesterday that it might—

Single Nation Blocks Peace, Bradley Says

Chief of Staff Cites Clenched Fist After Elbe Handclasps

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today that one nation "whose ambitions thrive best on tension, whose leaders are scornful of peace except on their own impossible terms," has blocked peace.

Without naming Russia, the Army's Chief of Staff said in a prepared address:

"Only three years after our soldiers clasped hands over the Elbe, this great wartime ally has spurned friendship with recrimination. It has clenched its fist and sulked in conspiracy behind its secretive borders."

He told a Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon gathering that as a result "we are neither at peace nor war. Instead we are engaged in this contest of tension, seeking agreement with those who disdain it, rearming, and struggling for peace.

"Time can be for or against us," he declared.

"It can be for us if diligence in our search for agreement equals the vigilance with which we prepare for a storm.

"It can be against us if disillusionment weakens our faith in discussion—or if vigilance corrodes while we wait."

Bradley said that new weapons have made the risk of war "a suicidal hazard."

"Any nation which does not exert its vigor, wealth, and armed strength in advance of conflict before it starts shall endanger its survival," he asserted.

"It is no longer possible to shield ourselves with arms alone against the ordeal of attack," he declared.

"Modern war visits destruction upon the victor and vanquished alike. Our only complete assurance of surviving World War III is to halt it before it starts.

"For that reason we clearly have no choice but to face the challenge of these strained times. To ignore danger of aggression is only to invite it."

James to Hang For Girl Killing

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—Eugene H. James, 31-year-old handyman described in court as a low grade moron, was sentenced to hang today for the knife slaying July 6 of 11-year-old Marsha Brill.

The long process of appealing to the State's highest court and asking the Governor for clemency starts now.

James also is under indictment in Washington for the strangely similar slaying only nine days earlier of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell.

He was convicted in late August, after a three-day trial in which his attorneys pleaded insanity and argued he did not possess the intelligence to carry out a deliberate murder.

Judge Herman M. Moser found that James has a psychopathic hatred of young girls, but ruled that he was sane under the standards set up by Maryland law.

Strike Grips 2 Harbors On East Coast

Wildcat Walkout Idling 13,000 at New York, Boston Expected to Spread

New York, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—A wildcat strike by some 13,000 longshoremen tied up the New York and Boston harbors today, halting foreign maritime trade including Marshall Plan shipments. It threatened to spread from Maine to Virginia.

With West Coast shipping paralyzed for the past 70 days by another strike, the men who load and unload the freighters and passenger liners here rebelled against a new contract, approved by their own union leaders and by shipping companies, providing for a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase.

10,000 Ignore Whistles

In the giant New York harbor, some 10,000 insurgent members of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association refused to go out on the piers when the boss stevedores blew their whistles at 8 a. m. Some men were working, but the bulk of the docks in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Hoboken were struck.

In Boston, according to the United States Maritime Commission, some 3000 men were affected. The commission said longshoremen still were or the job in such other big Eastern ports as Philadelphia, Baltimore, Hampton Roads, Va., and Portland, Me.

An 80-day "no strike" injunction under the Taft-Hartley law expired last midnight and the men immediately stopped work although results of a vote among some 60,000 longshoremen on the entire Eastern coast as to approval of the new contract were not expected to be final until Friday.

Spread Is Indicated

Indications were that other ports either would be affected before that time or on Friday when the vote is in. Joseph Ryan, ILA president, said only 1 of 14 local unions reported so far had approved the settlement.

A strike on the Gulf Coast tying up the entire United States Merchant Marine might follow although wage negotiations there begin in New Orleans on November 17 and union representatives have agreed to hold off a strike at least until December 9.

In a steady drizzle in New York, passengers boarding the French liner De Grasse had to carry their own luggage.

One of the amateur stevedores was a newly elected Congressman, Representatives James Murphy of New York.

An Army major, Ben Liles of Rockingham, N. C., arrived aboard the Fort Townshend from Newfoundland and began worrying about how to get his automobile off the boat before it sails Saturday for Bermuda. The pride of the U. S. passenger fleet, the America, arrives tomorrow and officials said that its more than 1000 passengers may have to carry their luggage ashore.

[The Associated Press quoted Cunard White Star Lines as saying the Mauretania, scheduled to arrive later this week, has been diverted to Halifax because of the pier walkout. The vessel is expected to dock tomorrow night. Passengers will be transported

House Rules Clique May Balk Truman

Dixie-Republican Coalition Counted On to Stalemate Social Reforms

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Practically the same House Rules Committee coalition, that stopped many a Roosevelt and Truman New Deal measure in the Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth Congress, may be back in the Eighty-first.

Unless the committee is enlarged, something presently not contemplated, the coalition will be sure of at least a stalemating 6-to-6 tie on any of the Truman social reforms it chooses to block.

If the coalition follows past patterns it will oppose, and may be in a position to tie up, such Truman-pledged measures as repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, reenactment of the excess profits tax, health insurance, Federal aid to education and even some of the broader social security reforms.

Civil Rights May Get Through

What will happen in the House on the President's civil rights program likewise may hinge on the Rules Committee division. But here Republican members, who are pledged in their platform to a similar program, may decide to walk out on the coalition.

The six-to-six stalemating tie would come if two Southern Democratic conservatives — Representatives E. E. Cox (Ga.) and Howard W. Smith (Va.)—vote as they have in the past with four Republican members against New Deal or "Re-Deal" measures.

This despite the fact that the traffic light Rules Committee will again be headed by an unreconstructed New Dealer, Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.).

Only 3 Democrats Sure of Spots

Sabath, and the two men who often nullified his chairmanship in the past, Cox and Smith, under the seniority rule are apparently the only Democrats sure of their spots on the committee.

In the last Congress Republicans had an eight-to-four party majority on the 12-man committee that decides just what bills shall go to the floor.

In the new Congress, unless Democratic leaders and a House party caucus decide to enlarge the committee to offset the likely coalition, party roles will be reversed and Democrats will have an eight-to-four majority.

That means the Democrats will name five new members to give them at least nominal control, and Republicans will have to strip their own membership to four.

But the catch is this: Even if all five of the new Democratic members named are in favor of the President's full program, and Chairman Sabath votes with them, they still wouldn't have enough strength to outvote the coalition in most tests involving New Deal legislation. A motion fails on any tie vote.

The three top-ranking Republican members of the committee—Chairman Leo E. Allen (Ill.) and Representatives Clarence J. Brown (Ohio) and James W. Wadsworth (N. Y.)—were returned in the last election.

The next three Republicans in order of rank were defeated. They were Representatives Forest A.

Grill Owners Framed, Policeman Testifies At Liquor Hearing

PVT. FRANK MANTHOS

Manthos Quotes Fellow Member of Force Who Charged 57 Law Violations

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Vice Squad Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace told of framing the proprietors of Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., a fellow officer testified before the Alcohol Beverage Control Board yesterday.

The witness, Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, First Precinct undercover man, asserted that Wallace told him he'd "sandbagged these people good" in preferring 57 charges of liquor law violation against the establishment.

Asked by Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise to explain the "sandbag" term, Manthos replied: "In my estimation it means like going up 9th street and seeing a prostitute you know has a record—you know she isn't working but you pull her in and charge her."

Manthos asserted the "sandbagging" statement was made to him by Wallace during a conversation in front of Keith's theater, 15th and G sts. nw., the day after the ABC hearing opened.

The witness said "Officer Fochette and Richey or Fields of the vice squad" were present at the time, as was "a special officer from Kann's Department store." He said he and Wallace walked "aside" from the group and conversed.

(Questioned by reporters as to the frame-up charges, Wallace had no comment to make, referring all queries to his superiors.)

The hearing was enlivened by frequent clashes between Wise and Defense Attorneys F. Joseph Donohue and Thomas M. David. The latter is an uncle of Henry G. David and Fred David, operators of the grill.

Exasperated by incessant bickering over technical problems in examination, Board Chairman Alan Payne at one point banged his fist on the table. "Would you like to have the board supply you with rifles or guns?" he demanded.

Manthos, whose 150 vice arrests had given him the title of "one-man vice squad," told the board his war service included submarine duty. Later he worked with the Office of Strategic Services and its successor Central Intelligence Group. He has been a Metropolitan policeman eight months.

The witness had declared he had been present in the grill on or about the times mentioned in Wallace's 57 charges covering September 15-23, with the exception of the first day.

Moving to attack the witness' credibility, Wise brought from him the admission that on the previous day he had testified Wallace's charges were false.

"Did you mean to say Wallace's testimony on every one of these 57 counts is false?" Wise demanded.

"No, sir," the witness replied. "Just which ones were not false?"

"Cutting off beer at 1:30 a. m."

"What else was true?"

"Nothing else was true."

(The 1:30 a. m. beer reference stemmed from a charge by Wallace that he was told the grill would stop serving beer at that time and he must drink whisky thereafter.)

After drawing from Manthos the admission that he had not been present during Wallace's testimony, Wise asked:

"How do you know what Wallace said was false if you didn't hear what he said?"

"He read it in the papers," interjected Attorney David referring to a previous remark by Manthos that

Americans Flee Riot-Torn Chinese Cities in Reds' Path

2 Barriers Hamper U. S. Efforts to Aid Chiang in Defense

The National Security Council, the top interdepartmental body dealing with national defense, has sent new recommendations to President Truman for dealing with the Communist advances in China.

This was disclosed yesterday by a State Department official, who said the situation in China "is deteriorating very fast and is a grave problem."

The nature of the Security Council's proposals was not disclosed, but it was learned that officials here felt hampered in at least two ways in trying to check the Communist tide.

The first is that the Foreign Assistance Act, which authorizes aid to China, specifies that such aid must go to the Republic of China. This means the Chiang Kai-shek regime, the only government in China that has been recognized by the United States.

No Local Aid

It means, also, that until the law is changed the United States cannot send military aid to any local commanders in China unless it is requested by Generalissimo Chiang.

The second thing hampering officials here is the need to wait for the new Congress to authorize and appropriate additional economic and military aid. Former Mayor Roger D. Lapham of San Francisco, chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration's special mission in China, has urged greatly increased aid to bolster the Chinese government against the Communists.

But even if the Government here agreed with Lapham, which is by no means certain, it would still have to wait until February at the earliest until the new Congress authorized and appropriated the money. State Department officials estimated yesterday that 112 million of the 125 million dollars authorized for military aid had already been turned over to the Chinese government.

Troops Amply Supplied

Reports reaching Washington show that the Chinese garrisons that surrendered to the Communists in the north were amply supplied with American arms, and were strong enough in numbers to hurl back the Communist armies—if the will to fight had not been lacking.

As it is, the Chinese government's position is crumbling so fast that Lapham may have to use existing American food and medical supplies to keep hordes of refugees

Nanking and Shanghai Put Under Army Rule After Days of Looting

Nanking, Nov. 10 (AP).—Americans fled today from a China torn by hunger riots as a Communist drive thundering down from the north exposed this shaken capital to direct attack.

Martial law was declared in the Nanking and Shanghai areas, scenes of angry rice riots and looting in the past few days. Nanking, China's capital, was quiet after Chiang Kai-shek decreed a curfew between 11 p. m., and 6 a. m. nightly.

Suchow Is Bypassed

Suchow, the big government base 170 miles to the northwest, was by-passed by powerful Red columns, military reports indicated. This would seem to have isolated the bulk of the government troops trying to block the road to the Yangtze and Nanking.

Against the twin perils of advancing Communists and growing hunger riots in Nanking, Shanghai and Hangchow, the United States Army moved swiftly to remove Americans.

Dependents of military personnel were being flown to Tsingtao, the United States Navy anchorage 280 miles to the north. More than a dozen transport planes were being used. All 500 dependents are erpected to be flown out within three days.

The United States Embassy told other American nationals that river transport was coming up the Yangtze for them from Shanghai. It was indicated that, if things get worst, a United States warship will come to Nanking to protect the departing Americans.

U. S. Group Closes Shop

The United States military advisory group closed shop in the north China city of Peiping and its six officers were flown here. Foreigners were leaving both Peiping and Tientsin.

Americans were warned to stay off Nanking's streets. Hungry Chinese were in an ugly mood. As usual at such times, antiforeign feeling is high.

Mobs raided 36 rice shops. One woman was trampled to death. Armed police rode on every food truck moving through the streets.

Rice riots flared also in Shanghai's suburbs and three large riots were reported from the coastal city of Hangchow, 100 miles southwest of Shanghai.

China's new gold yuan has lost its value and farmers with rice are refusing to sell. President Chiang held almost continuous conferences at home, trying to find a way out of the crisis.

Eisenhower's Own Story

Secret Security Test Made Of All on General's Staff

V

In modern war, battle areas frequently extend over hundreds of miles of front and are equally extensive in depth. Throughout such a theater are combat troops, replacement camps, hospital centers, lines of communication, repair shops, depots, ports, and a myriad of service organizations, both air and ground. In the same region dwells a civil population, sometimes friendly, sometimes hostile, sometimes neutral or mixed in attitude. All these units, individuals, and activities must be carefully controlled, so that everything is coordinated toward the achievement of the commander's strategic plan.

An early, happily minor, break of security by an American officer who had taken too much to drink brought to my attention the need for exercising particular care as to the habits of every individual assigned to an important post. Loyalty and efficiency were not enough — discretion, reliability, and sobriety were mandatory.

Where individuals were relatively unknown or untested our highly efficient Secret Service organization was called upon to conduct a confidential investigation. All on my personal staff, without their knowledge, were so checked and tested over a period of weeks. The issues were too great to trust to chance; even chauffeurs had occasional opportunity to pick up information of value to the enemy.

In the organization, operation, and composition of my staff we proceeded as though all its members belonged to a single nation. Nevertheless we tried to include in every section individuals from both nationalities, and certain modifications in normal United States organization were compelled by differences in the staff procedures of the two countries.

In the early days officers of the two nationalities were apt to conduct their business in the attitude of a bulldog meeting a tomcat, but as time went on their own discoveries of mutual respect and friendship developed a team that in its unity of purpose, devotion to duty, and absence of friction could not have been excelled if all its members had come from the same nation and the same service.

Because of the chance that through accident something might incapacitate me, particularly in the early stages of the operation, it was decided best to have the deputy also an American, so that the fiction of a practically exclusively American operation would be preserved as long as possible.

To this post was named Major General Mark W. Clark, who had come to England as commander of the II Corps. He was a relatively young man but an extremely able professional, with a faculty for picking fine assistants and for de-

Archbishop O'Boyle Invested With Pallium at Rites Here

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle yesterday received the Sacred Pallium, insigne of his rank, in a solemn ceremony at Saint Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave., nw.

The pallium is a circular band of white wool two inches wide with pendants front and back, worn over the shoulders, outside the outer vestment or chasuble. The Pope and archbishops alone may wear it.

Beginning the colorful rite was a procession, led by a crossbearer flanked by two acolytes. Clergy of the archdiocese of Washington, brothers and priests of the religious orders, altar boys, choir members, 27 monsignori and 12 purple-garbed bishops marched in the line from the chancery to the cathedral.

Following the Knights of Malta, St. Gregory, and St. Sebastian came the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate, and the archbishop.

While the Apostolic Delegate vested for the celebration of the pontifical mass, the Rt. Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's, welcomed the congregation. Msgr. Cartwright said the ceremony marks a further stage in the development of the church.

Right Man Jailed in Murders At Glen Burnie, Police Claim

Ferndale, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Detectives stamped "solved" today on the puzzling Glen Burnie (Md.) double murder case that had stumped them for seven weeks.

They swore out murder warrants at Anne Arundel County police headquarters here for Thomas Alexander Edwards, 23-year-old employe of a Baltimore sugar refinery.

James C. Morton, jr., Anne Arundel County State's attorney, announced the county grand jury will be asked to act on the case when it meets November 16. Meanwhile, Edwards will be held without bail in the Baltimore City Jail.

Chief John H. Souers, jr., said Edwards had admitted owning a ".380 caliber" Czechoslovakian pistol and that FBI laboratory tests showed it was the gun used to shoot a young couple out on their weekly date.

The victims were John H. Mahlan, 25-year-old Glen Burnie postal worker, and Mary C. Kline, 18, who worked as a typist for a Baltimore manufacturing firm.

The accused, an unmarried veteran of three years in Europe with the Army Quartermaster Corps, fell into a trap baited with a stool pigeon.

He had been picked up three weeks ago when investigators heard a story that he had a strange, foreign-make gun. He was held for five days but released when he explained he had bought the gun from another returning veteran at Camp Kilmer, N. J., in

Truman Not Going On Moscow Mission

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Nov. 10—The hardy rumor of a meeting between President Truman and Premier Joseph Stalin was exploded again today.

Eben Ayers, assistant White House press secretary, said emphatically that Mr. Truman had no plans for a meeting with the Russian leader.

He said that Mr. Truman's position was the same as it has been for the last three years that he would not go overseas again to meet Stalin, but would be glad to see him if he came to the United States.

Has Invited Him Twice

The Chief Executive has extended two invitations to Stalin to visit him in Washington. The first time when the two met in Potsdam in July, 1945. The second occasion was in the spring of 1946.

Mr. Truman was under fire on this latter occasion for introducing Winston Churchill at Westminister College in Fulton, Mo., when the former Prime Minister made his famous "Iron Curtain" speech. Churchill was awarded an honorary degree by the college.

Mr. Truman in sending Gen. Walter Bedell Smith to Moscow as the United States Ambassador to Russia, directed him to invite Premier Stalin to come to the United States. He said he would arrange for him to receive an honorary degree.

Report Aired by Tass

The latest report of a Truman-Stalin meeting, written by Columnist Tris Coffin, was published in the Washington Times-Herald and later broadcast by Tass, the Russian news agency.

The columnist said that President Truman wants a conference with world leaders on peace and might even go to Moscow.

The Tass dispatch, quoting coffin, said "although no defiiite decision has been reached, Truman presumes he can meet Stalin at his place (presumably Washington) instead of going to Moscow.

"However, if Stalin does not leave the Soviet Union, Truman is filled with such a determination to put into effect his program of peace that possibly he will himself go to Moscow."

The wide publicity that the Russians gave the report puzzled White House aides.

At Washington, Undersecretary of State Lovet told a news conference that Ayers had "given the answer" when he was asked whether Mr. Truman might go to Moscow.

Lovett told the newsmen that Russia had not replied to a United States proposal to revive negotiations for settlement of the Soviet 11-billion-dollar Lend-Lease debt.

Vatican Paper Hopeful

Hope was expressed by the Vatican City newspaper L'Observatore Romano that the American elections have opened the way for a Truman-Stalin meeting.

Eddie Gilmore, Associated Press Moscow correspondent, quoted an authoritative foreign source as saying it was likely there would be some kind of agreement among the French, British and Americans beforehand if such a Truman-Stalin conference took place.

The source quoted by Gilmore added: "Such a meeting might take place, everything else seemingly have failed to produce an accord."

Premier Stalin was reported on vacation in the south of Russia.

Inauguration Task May Go To Hildreth

Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington lawyer who handled grandstand arrangements for three Roosevelt inaugurations, yesterday was being prominently mentioned in Democratic circles here as choice for the general chairman of the 1949 inaugural committee.

Plans for the inauguration now await only appointment of the chairman before they go into full swing.

The District government already has a $37,100 fund available for inaugural expenses which was appropriated at the last congressional session.

Commissioner John Russell Young pointed out yesterday that among details which must be cleaned up before the inaugural day are erection of stands, information booths, first aid stations and temporary public comfort stations.

Out-of-town policemen to aid in traffic clearance are imported for the occasion, with their travel expenses and meals paid.

Three Oddly Titled MSS. Found in Porter's Effects

A series of strangely titled manuscripts which may figure in the attack on Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson's $16,586,571 will were left by the late Charles B. Porter, it was disclosed yesterday.

Former treasurer of the Washington Times-Herald, which the late Mrs. Patterson owned and published, Porter plunged to his death from a Clarksburg, W. Va., hotel room on September 14, less than two months after Mrs. Patterson's death.

Porter was originally named as one of the eight executives to whom the Times-Herald was willed, but a May, 1947, codicil removed him from the will.

Disclosure of Porter's documents, a mysterious "riding boot wrapped in newspaper" in his effects, and minutely detailed questioning of two Times-Herald employes who flew to Clarksburg aboard a chartered plane just after his death, added new drama to the complex will case.

The new developments came as attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, who is challenging the will of her mother, Mrs. Patterson, took 254 pages of depositions from three witnesses.

They were Sidney Epstein, Times-Herald reporter, John Thomas Barber, Times-Herald accounting department executive, and Charles F. R. Ogilby, lawyer and court-appointed collector for Mr. Porter's estate.

Among documents in an Army foot locker belonging to Porter was one entitled "Third Firing"; a 30-page handwritten manuscript entitled "Conclusions," and other writings called "Book I" and "Book II," Ogilby testified.

While the subject matter of the documents was not disclosed, it is believed some or all may refer to his employment with the Times-Herald on two occasions, or his last employment as personal financial adviser to Mrs. Patterson, ending in May, 1948.

Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys have been attempting to gather information which may aid them to break the will. They attacked it on grounds that it was executed through force, duress and coercion, and that Mrs. Patterson was of unsound mind when she made it.

Last week in District Court Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys lost an attempt to get blanket access to all Mrs. Patterson's' papers in what the will's executors opposed as a fishing expedition."

The depositions made public yesterday were not disclosed by Mrs. Gizycka's attorney, William A. Roberts, but by Louis G. Caldwell, a member of the law firm representing the executors named in the contested will.

Roberts questioned Epstein and Barber for hours about the trip they took to Clarksburg after the news of Porter's death was announced. He asked repeatedly why they had flown there in a chartered plane, and asked if they had seen a certain "manuscript" in Porter's effects.

Both Times-Herald employes insisted there was nothing unusual in the special plane trip, and categorically denied anything had been removed by them from three suitcases of Porter which Epstein brought back to Washington.

Epstein said that he was working at the Times-Herald when word of Porter's death was received via the Associated Press, which also disclosed Porter had left a will naming as executrix Mrs. Sybilla Campbell, housekeeper for Mrs. Patterson.

He and Barber left for Pittsburgh by regular airline about 11 p. m. on September 15, said Epstein, and from there chartered a 21-passenger plane to Clarksburg. Epstein returned from Clarksburg about 5 a. m. the following morning, with Porter's effects, while Barber remained there for final arrangements, it was stated.

At National Airport, said Epstein, he was met by Mason Peters, night managing editor of the Times-Herald, and Peters' fiancee, and they went to the home of Epstein's fiancee at McLean Gardens because she was worried about his absence.

There, said Epstein, he and Peters casually looked over Porter's belongings.

"Did Mr. Peters take anything out of the bags?" asked Roberts. "He did not, sir," replied Epstein, who said Peters looked "merely out of curiosity."

Nothing was removed, said Epstein, and later that morning he took the bags to Mrs. Campbell. Epstein said he had no compunction about looking through Porter's effects because they had been examined in Clarksburg by police and newspapermen.

Ogilby said the locker with Porter's documents was located in storage here, together with other documents and objects in Porter's apartment at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments.

Roberts asked, "Did you find a boot there, a riding boot?" Replied Ogilby, "I did find what appears to be one riding boot all wrapped up. I didn't open it . . ."

"You don't know whether there is anything in that boot at present, do you?" Roberts asked. "I haven't the faintest idea," replied Ogilby, according to the deposition.

Also among Porter's affects, said Ogilby, were a "package of colored yarns . . . and partially accomplished needlework, a book by Dale Carnegie on "How to Stop Worrying and Start Living," a file marked "Psychiatry," a magazine article entitled, "Does Your Job Make You Sick," and a manuscript entitled "You Can't Go Home Again" (Porter was a native of Scotland). Ogilby is scheduled to continue his deposition on Friday, when he will state other documents found in Porter's effects.

Nurse Is Attacked By 2 Women Pickets

Detroit, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—A nurse was attacked by two women pickets and a doctor was threatened today in the first outbreak of violence in the 3-day-old strike of Harper Hospital employes.

The nurse, Nora Payne, told police she was struck from behind by two pickets as she was about to board a bus near the hospital.

U. S. May Renew Offer to Reds Of 40-Year Security Treaty

it would lead to an early meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, with the Russians, of course, taking an important part.

At such a meeting the United States can be expected to renew the offer of the Byrnes treaty, partly as a help toward getting a settlement on Germany, and partly to take some of the sting out of the coming Atlantic pact.

Action on Vandenburg Resolution

The Atlantic treaty discussions will soon move into a new phase. The State Department expects soon to get detailed proposals from the five "western union" countries—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—on how their own 50-year defensive alliance can be broadened to provide American and Canadian "association," within the terms of the Vandenberg resolution adopted by the Senate last spring.

There is less and less talk of bringing other European countries into the "western union" at this time. Italy, for example, is a former enemy country virtually disarmed by a peace treaty and it would be hard to reconcile the peace treaty with Italian membership in a western European alliance.

Instructions From Truman

Other western countries whose security is important to the United States are nevertheless too weak and too exposed to contribute any military strength to a defensive alliance now. There is a growing feeling here that the inclusion of such countries would be a liability until the military strength of the west has grown much stronger.

As soon as the five nations' proposals are received, Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett will resume his "exploratory" talks with their Ambassadors here, and will also start consulting congressional leaders. Lovett went to the White House last Saturday to bring President Truman up to date on the discussions, and to get the President's instructions for the future.

A formal conference with the Europeans, to work out a final treaty for submission to Congress, will not come until a good deal more preliminary work has been done.

Presumably such a treaty, providing American "association" with western Europe, will be the formal instrument under which the United States will start supplying military equipment to the western Europeans. Defense Secretary Forrestal is now in Europe getting some idea of what such help might cost in the coming fiscal year.

He is expected to see, among others, Maj. Gen. A. Franklin Kibber, the American representative at the military talks held under Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery's chairmanship earlier in the week.

Acting Secretary Lovett told reporters yesterday he knew nothing of the story, attributed to American delegation sources in Paris, that President Truman and Secretary Marshall would soon plan direct American-Soviet discussions leading to a talk with Premier Stalin.

If there is a Council of Foreign Ministers soon, it would be one way of having high-level discussions with the Russians. If there is none, it is conceivable that Secretary Marshall himself might go to Moscow for a talk with Stalin—assuming that the Berlin blockade is lifted.

Marshall Expected to See Truman on Possible Talks

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP).—Secretary of State Marshall was expected tonight to confer soon with President Truman about the possibility of direct peace talks between the United States and Russia.

Informed Americans at the United Nations Assembly said the Secretary would go to Washington later this month for a full review of the world situation after Mr. Truman ends his vacation at Key West, Fla.

These sources said the question of direct talks with Russia was expected to be one of the matters to be discussed.

Suggestions published in Moscow and Rome that Mr. Truman might see Prime Minister Stalin personally in an attempt to settle the bitter East-West differences were received generally with enthusiasm at the U. N. Assembly.

Marshall would not comment on the possibility.

Harness (Ind.), J. Edgar Chenoweth (Col.), and Representative Ross Rizley (Okla.), who ran for the Senate and missed.

Their defeat normally would move Representative Christian A. Herter (Mass.), more liberal than most of his colleagues, up to the fourth Republican seat on the committee.

But Herter's advancement isn't at all certain. Representative Charles A. Halleck (R. Ind.), held a ranking post on the committee before he was elected House GOP floor leader in 1947. If Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), is made Republican floor leader in the new Congress, as expected, Halleck may want his old Rules post back.

Soviet Adds New Airlift Menace

High Prices

12 Million To Strike In Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 10 (AP).—Bizonal trade union leaders decided tonight to call a 24-hour strike of possibly 12 million workers in the Anglo-American zones of Germany in protest against high prices.

The strike, set for Friday, may be the largest in Germany since the chaotic days of 1923.

Labor leaders said most of the 13,500,000 workers in the bizonal area would join the strike, although only about 4,500,000 are members of trade unions.

Fritz Tarnow, secretary of the Bizonal Trade Union Council, said the strike would affect factories, stores and agricultural work.

He said a number of workers in key posts were exempted from the strike call, such as railway, postal, telephone, telegraph and health department workers. Police and employes of public information agencies such as wire services and radio stations will stay on the job.

Tarnew emphasized that the council had banned demonstrations or any form of disorder during the strike.

Berlin, Nov. 10 (AP).—Russia has threatened to force down all aircraft wandering off the air corridors on the supply route to Berlin.

Official sources in western Berlin said the Soviet move was an effort to cripple the airlift by methods short of war and raised the possibility of serious and numerous incidents.

It is the most drastic move yet made by the Russians to cut off air transport to the city.

The Russian threat was disclosed tonight when Brig. Gen. C. K. Gailey, chief of staff to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, replied to a letter dated yesterday from G. S. Lukjantschenko, Soviet chief of staff. The letter alleged a long list of violations of airlane boundaries by aircraft of the Western powers.

In reply, Gailey said "full and complete responsibility will rest on the shoulders of the Soviet authorities should any injury be sustained by any of our pilots, or should any damage occur to our planes from any Soviet action taken in this connection."

The Soviet notice also was sent to the British, who had not yet replied. The British took the view, however, that their pilots fly inside the lanes.

To enforce the order, Soviet planes might have to open fire on British and American aircraft. In bad flying weather, it is hard for pilots to tell whether they are exactly within the corridor limits. It would be just as hard for Soviet fighter pilots to tell whether they were taking action outside or inside the corridor.

Vote in U. N. 36-6 for Free Flow of News

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP).—The U. N. Assembly's Social Committee voted 36 to 6 today for the free flow of news "regardless of frontiers."

The committee rejected Soviet amendments preventing freedom of speech and press "for purposes of propagating fascism, aggression and for provoking hatred as between nations," requiring state assistance in "publication of democratic organs," and limiting freedom of thought and expression "to the interests of national security."

As the seventeenth article of the 28-article Charter of Human Rights, the freedom of news provision has only moral force. A treaty of enforcement has not yet been put forward.

The committee then went on to article 18, which declares "everyone has the right to freedom of assembly and association."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt accused Russia tonight of seeking to "justify the repression of free assembly and free association."

She and the British delegate, Mrs. Freda Corbert, bitterly opposed a Soviet amendment to forbid "by law under pain of punishment" all "organizations of a fascist or antidemocratic nature."

The committee took no action today on the article.

D. C. Tuberculosis Group Moves to End 'Means Test'

The District Tuberculosis Association is moving to end the "means test" in connection with hospitalization of tuberculous patients, it was announced yesterday.

According to Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the association, a recommendation will be sent to Health Officer George C. Ruhland that the present method of requesting hospital fees from tuberculous patients or their relatives be discontinued.

Citing the move as being in the interest of public welfare, Mrs. Lowe asserted it would relieve patients of anxiety, and shorten the time between diagnosis and hospitalization. Among other benefits she mentioned was a saving of time and money through eliminating services of personnel responsible for investigative work.

Food Rationing End Scheduled in Belgium

Brussels, Nov. 10 (AP).—Food rationing in Belgium will be abolished by January 1, Minister of Food Georges Moens de Fernig told the Chamber of Deputies today.

Belgium thus is likely to be the first European country to abolish food rationing since it was established during World War II.

Attack Menaces Nanking's Gateway alive. If the Communists now capture Suchow, as they threaten to do, the road to Nanking and the Yangtze Valley is open to them.

For this reason, among others, officials here find it almost impossible to estimate how much additional aid, if any, would be needed, or whether it would be of any use.

Former Ambassador William C. Bullitt flew to China on a mission of inquiry yesterday, denying that anyone in the State Department had tried to prevent him from going. The statement had been made by Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), chairman of the Congressional Watchdog Committee on Foreign aid, who had sent Bullitt to make a first-hand investigation.

Bullitt said he had told Acting Secretary Robert A. Lovett by telephone about his mission. Lovett told reporters yesterday that the department had raised no objection.

China Survey Trip Planned by Hoffman

By The Associated Press

Paul G. Hoffman, America's foreign aid chief, last night was planning a flying one-the-spot survey of the "desperate" situation in China.

A source close to the ECA administrator said Hoffman will leave "early in December unless the situation, by that time, becomes too dangerous, or improper."

By "dangerous" the informant presumably was speculating on the possibility of war engulfing parts of China Hoffman might be planning to visit.

The reference to "improper" was taken to mean the possibility that ECA chief's plans might be vetoed by top officials of the State Department or President Truman.

'Hydro-Pulse' Power Gives Torpedoes 100-Knot Speed

By C. B. Allen

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (NYHT).—Development of a water-burning "hydropulse" power plant for torpedoes and "other marine vehicles" of the Navy, which will give them speeds up to 100 knots, was disclosed here today.

Dr. Fritz Zwicky, director of research for the Aero-Jet Research Corp., Azusa, Calif., and professor of astro-physics at California Institute of Technology, said the new engine "surpasses all other forms yet developed" in propulsive efficiency.

It is one of more than a score of unconventional-type power plants developed for the military services by his firm, the best known being the Jato (jet-assisted take-off) rocket used to get overloaded planes into the air or give them abnormal bursts of speed in combat emergencies.

The hydropulse works on the same principle as the pulse-jet engine employed by the Germans to drive their V-1 buzz-bombs across the Channel against British targets. However, it uses a fuel spontaneously combustible on exposure to water.

Highest speed achieved by the Navy's wartime torpedoes was 40 to 50 knots.

Dr. Zwicky also disclosed that his company is working on future plans for a terrapulse power plant to propel vehicles through the surface of the earth itself, and said their eventual achievement was "a scientific certainty."

Terrapulse driven machines, he indicated, would be of great practical commercial value in drilling and mining operations, while their military importance was "obvious." It would be "entirely possible," Dr. Zwicky said, to launch an attack against an enemy on the other side of the world by boring all the way through the earth, with futuristic earth-burning tanks.

VA Hospitals Need 100 Doctors

Veterans Administration has openings for 100 full-time doctors for duty in tuberculosis hospitals throughout the Nation, it was made public today. Salaries offered range from $4479 to $10,305 annually.

Applicants were urged to write to the Chief Medical Director, Veterans Administration, Washington 25, D. C.

During the past year 18,222 veterans were admitted to VA hospitals for treatment for tuberculosis. Discharges during the same period totaled 18,701.

Output Rising

French Coal Strike Fizzles Toward End

Paris, Nov. 10 (NYHT).—The French coal strike appeared to be broken tonight.

Daily production, the government announced, had climbed to 82,500 tons, or more than half the normal output of 160,000 tons. Recovery now was advancing at the rate of 11,000 tons each day, it was added.

Jules Moch, Minister of Interior, reported these figures to the press. The man who directs the troops and police still guarding the coal basins added that calm generally was restored and sabotage decreasing.

The coal miners' strike, launched 5½ weeks ago by the pro-Communist General Confederation of Labor (CGT), has cost France about five million tons and forced the government to cut food imports to order one million additional tons of fuel from overseas.

Although the CGT has disputed the government's statements about miners resuming work, it seemed evident the union now has dropped its original slogan—that not an ounce of coal would come out of the mines until the government knuckled under to the CGT demands.

Brazil, Mexico Eligible To Get Radioisotopes

British Complete Sale of 55 Jet Engines to Soviet

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—Supply Minister George Strauss today said Britain has fulfilled contracts to sell Russia 55 jet airplane engines "and no further deliveries are contemplated."

Answering a question in the House of Commons from Conservative William Prescott, Strauss said the engines were sent to Russia between December, 1946, and January, 1948.

Prescott wanted to know whether representatives of the Soviet Union had been permitted to inspect production of such engines.

"In accordance with normal procedure," Strauss replied, "two Russian inspectors were authorized to check the final assembly, testing and packing of these engines."

Entire Eisenhower Staff Given Secret Security Tests

veloping a high morale within his staff. During the planning stages of Torch, General Clark acted as deputy and, until the arrival of General Smith in early September, as chief of staff. More than any other one person, Clark was responsible for the effective coordination of detail achieved in this, the first Allied plan for amphibious attack in the Mediterranean.

From the first it was clear that Oran and Algiers must be attacked under any plan of operation. Both were important ports and the airfields near Oran were essential for staging short-range fighter aircraft from Gibraltar to front lines, wherever they might happen to be. Algiers, of course, was the center of political, economic, and military activity in the area.

Fixing the flanks of the assault, then, was what we had to decide. In the one case we could attack Casablanca, Oran, and Algiers; in the other, Oran, Algiers, and Bone.

The Alternatives In Africa Attack

Over this question we studied long and earnestly. I came to favor, personally, taking the entire force inside the Mediterranean. I believed that Tunis was so great a prize that we should land initially as far east as Bone.

Admittedly, to pass inside the Mediterranean without establishing a base at Casablanca involved additional hazard, but I felt that as long as we were risking so much we might as well put all our chips on one number with the idea that Casablanca, when cut off from the eastward, would either fall of its own weight or could be captured by columns moving back down the railway from Oran. I was influenced also by the desire to avoid the very great natural hazards involved in landing at Casablanca.

We communicated this scheme to the Combined Chiefs of Staff and found that the United States Chiefs of Staff were opposed to omitting Casablanca from the original attack plan. They were of the belief that the risks involved in depending entirely upon the Strait of Gibraltar for a line of communications were too great and that, in spite of the limited capacity of the Casablanca-Oran railway, we must quickly secure it as partial insurance against possible Axis attempts against the Gibraltar bottleneck. Moreover, they believed that unless a strong force landed instantly in Morocco the Spanish would be much more inclined to enter the war or to permit the Germans to use Spain as an avenue of advance against our rear.

As far as I can recall, this was the only instance in the war when any part of one of our proposed operational plans was changed by intervention of higher authority. We cheerfully accepted the decision because the governing considerations were political more than tactical, and political estimates are the function of governments, not of soldiers. However, we did point out that the early capture of Tunis was, by this decision, removed from the realm of the probable to the remotely possible.

Ike Appraises George Patton

I notified General Marshall of my desire to have General Patton command the Casablanca expedition and within a short time George reported to me in London, where he was thoroughly briefed on his portion of the plan. Hardly had he returned to Washington before I received a message stating that he had become embroiled in such a distressing argument with the Navy Department that serious thought was being driven to his relief from command.

Feeling certain that the difficulty, whatever, its nature, was nothing more than the result of a bit of George's flair for the dramatic, I protested at once, suggesting that if his personality was causing any difficulty in conferences the issue could be met by sending him out with his troops and allowing some staff member to represent him in the completion of planning details. In any event the matter was passed over.

I well knew that Patton delighted to startle his hearers with fantastic statements; many men who believed they knew him well never penetrated past the shell of showmanship in which he constantly and carefully clothed himself. But he was essentially a shrewd battle leader who invariably gained the devotion of his subordinates. From early life his one ambition was to be a successful battlefield commander. Because of this he was an inveterate reader of military history and his heroes were the great captains of past ages.

All the mannerisms and idiosyncrasies he developed were of his own deliberate adoption. One of his poses, for example, was that of the most hard-boiled individual in the Army. Actually he was so soft-hearted, particularly where a personal friend was concerned, that it was possibly his greatest fault.

Later in the war he once vehemently demanded that I discharge 80 of his officers because, as he said, of inefficiency and timidity bordering on cowardice. He was so exercised and so persistent that I agreed, contingent upon his sending me a report in writing. Apparently astonished by my acquiescence, he began postponing from week to week, on one excuse or another, the submission of his list. Finally, he confessed, rather sheepishly, that he had reconsidered and wanted to discharge no one.

What to Do About De Gaulle

From the inception of the invasion project, our governments carefully considered the possibility of including General de Gaulle, then in London, in Torch planning. Units under his command had taken part in the ill-fated Dakar expedition, where the attacking forces had to retire in confusion in the face of local French resistance. The British always believed that this fiasco resulted from leaks in De Gaulle's London headquarters.

Our instructions from the two governments, possibly colored by this unfortunate early experience, were to the effect that under no circumstances was any information concerning the proposed expedition to be communicated to General de Gaulle.

There was confirmation of the assumption that General de Gaulle's presence in the initial assaulting forces would incite determined opposition on the part of the French garrisons. During the course of our planning in London a constant stream of information came to us from consuls and other officials whom our State Department maintained in Africa throughout the war.

All of this information was to the effect that in the regular officer corps of the French army De Gaulle was, at that time, considered a disloyal soldier. His standing with the resistance elements of the civil population was vastly different. But at that moment resistance elements, particularly in Africa, were inarticulate and ineffective—and we had to win over the armed services as a first objective.

It is possible to understand why De Gaulle was disliked within the ranks of the French army. At the time of France's surrender in 1940 the officers who remained in the army had accepted the position and orders of their government and had given up the fight. From their viewpoint, if the course chosen by De Gaulle was correct, then every French officer who obeyed the orders of his government was a poltroon.

If De Gaulle was a loyal Frenchman they had to regard themselves as cowards. Naturally the officers did not choose to think of themselves in this light; rather they considered themselves as loyal Frenchmen carrying out the orders of constituted civilian authority and it followed that they officially and personally regarded De Gaulle as a deserter.

The Secret Trip Of Robert Montgomery

Nevertheless it was known that there was a strong anti-German and anti-Vichy sentiment in North Africa even among some of the Army officers. It was believed possible that if a sufficient show of force could be made in the initial attack all these officers might find that their honor had been satisfied by token resistance and bowing to the inevitable, would join in the fight against the traditional foe that had humiliated them in 1940.

It was a complicated and hazy situation, but keeping the expedition entirely secret from the French in London was the fixed policy of the Allied governments. An added and most important motive in doing so was the fact that only through perfect surprise could the expedition succeed. The fewer people who knew anything at all about the matter the better.

After some six weeks of intensive planning we were notified that Mr. Robert D. Murphy, the senior American State Department officer in North Africa, would pay us a secret visit to discuss with us the political implications and possibilities in that region.

Mr. Murphy, who had long been stationed in Africa, was early taken into the confidence of the President of the United States and informed of the possibility of military action in that region. With his staff of assistants he not only conducted a continuing survey of public opinion, but he did his best to discover among the military and political leaders those individuals who were definitely hostile to the Axis and occupying their posts merely out of a sense of duty to France.

Affable, friendly, exceedingly shrewd, and speaking French capably, he was admirably suited for his task. Unquestionably his missionary work between 1940 and late 1942 had much to do with eventual success.

His trip to my headquarters in London, in the fall of 1942, was conducted in the greatest secrecy. In Washington, where he went first, he was placed in uniform, given a fictional commission as lieutenant colonel, and came to see me under the name of McGowan. I met him at a rendezvous outside the city and within a matter of twenty-four hours he was again on the way to Washington.

In the early fall Admiral Ramsay was relieved by the British Chiefs of Staff as the naval commander of the expedition and in his place was assigned Admiral Sir Andrew B. Cunningham, whom I then met for the first time. He was the Nelsonian type of admiral. He believed that ships went to sea in order to find and destroy the enemy. He thought always in terms of attack, never of defense. He was vigorous, hardy, intelligent, and straightforward.

British Admiral A Real Sea Dog

In spite of his toughness, the degree of affection in which he was held by all grades and ranks of the British Navy and, to a large extent, the other services, both British and American, was nothing short of remarkable. He was a real sea dog. There will always live with me his answer when I asked him in the fall of 1943 to send the British battle fleet, carrying a division of soldiers, into Taranto Harbor, known to be filled with mines and treachery.

"Sir," he said, "His Majesty's Fleet is here to go wherever you may send it!"

We had to coordinate our plans not only with the British but also with the United States Navy. This was by no means simple, and it required a great many conferences. Two of the Navy's capable officers had been assigned by Admiral King to assist in planning, and they were welcomed by Brigadier General Alfred M. Gruenther, chief American planner, with the statement that there were a thousand questions the Navy could help answer. "We are here only to listen," was their answer. I knew that if I could talk personally to Admiral King there would be no difficulty, but under the circumstances these snarls had to be worked out with care and patience.

Along with planning went inspections of training and physical preparation. Our final and most ambitious training exercise in landing operations took place in western Scotland, during abominable weather. A group of the staff accompanied me to observe the operation and were far from encouraged by the evident lack of skill, particularly among ship companies and boat crews.

While on this trip I received a piece of information that carried me back again to America's traditional peacetime indifference toward preparedness. I was told by a troop commander that his unit had just received its final consignment of "bazookas," the infantryman's best weapon of defense against tanks.

Since his command was to begin embarking the next day, he was completely at a loss as to how to teach his men the use of this vitally needed weapon. He said, "I don't know anything about it myself except from hearsay."

Nothing more could now be done in London. It was a relief to lock up a desk. To account for my absence from London an elaborate story was circulated that I was making a visit to Washington. Even the President helped out in this particular deception. Actually we took off for Gibraltar, in a flight of five Fortresses, on November 5, 1942.

General Eisenhower tells the story of General Giraud for the first time in the sixth installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published here tomorrow. It includes his first meeting with General Giraud, in one of the subterranean passages hollowed out of the Rock of Gibraltar, which General Eisenhower calls "one of my most distressing interviews of the war."

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

Senate Action Due Soon on 900 Jobs

Chilly Welcome

Taylor Heads For Foot of Senate Class

Whether Senator Glen H. Taylor (Idaho) returns to the Senate as a Wallace Progressive or a Democrat, he will get the short end of any Democratic committee assignments.

At least that is the consensus of returning Senate Democrats. No formal decision will be reached until they caucus around year's end, but it's no secret that Taylor, Wallace's running mate, is headed for the bottom of the class.

As for the party status of Henry Wallace, that's out of the jurisdiction of any Democratic caucus.

But Senator J. Howard McGrath (R. I.) yesterday made it pretty clear where the Democratic National Committee stands.

Said McGrath: "So far as I am concerned, Henry Wallace has taken himself out of the Democratic Party and he can stay out."

But McGrath, as chairman, and his national committee, is keeping strictly out of legislative angles of the Taylor case. He speaks for the party, but Democrats in House and Senate, in caucus assembled, will decide what is done on the legislative level.

Indications are that Dixiecrats will get kinder treatment from the Senate caucus, in passing out committee assignments, than the man who ran for Vice President with Henry Wallace.

Some of the Democratic Senators point out that Taylor used the floor of the Senate to attack both Truman and Barkley after he was nominated on the Wallace ticket. They said at least most of the Southern Senate opponents of Truman kept silent.

Actually, more practical party considerations are involved. Any Senate purge of States' rights Southerners, actively or passively opposed to the President's election, might whittle down the 12-vote margin of Senate Democratic control to zero, make it impossible for them to organize the Senate.

If Taylor returns under the Progressive label, it would mean only a one-vote organizing loss. The Democrats would take over by a vote of 53 to 42 instead of 54 to 42.

Providing of course that extremist Southerners aren't scared or pushed into a Senate organization bolt.

Taylor, who, with Wallace, will participate in the national committee meeting of the Progressive Party in Chicago Saturday, already has put out a few feelers about returning to the Democratic fold.

Early election night, when the Senate division appeared close, Associated Press asked him how he would vote on organizing the Senate. He said he would vote with the Democrats.

The election gave thousands of Federal jobholders a tighter grip on their jobs—but for some 900 of them it meant they'll get their jobs officially.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) today said one of the first acts of the new Democratic-controlled Senate in January will be the speedy approval of all stalemated nominations.

"There'll be no delay in confirming those appointments," Lucas predicted. And his word carries weight because he is generally expected to be the new majority leader.

Beginning early this year, the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress refused to act on the huge batch of nominations sent to Capitol Hill by President Truman. Party leaders were confident that by doing nothing the plums would fall to Republicans under a Republican President.

But the Democratic victory at the polls last week assured the hundreds of anxious nominees their jobs are safe.

More than 700 of them are postmasters scattered throughout the country.

Among others whose nominations now appear certain are James Boyd of Colorado to be director of the Bureau of Mines; Thomas C. Buchanan of Pennsylvania to the Federal Power Commission, and Roy W. Harper of Missouri to be a Federal judge in that State. Harper is a former Missouri State Democratic chairman.

Boyd was named Bureau of Mines director in August, 1947—and has served for the past year without pay in his $10,000-a-year job.

The device of interim appointments—that is, reappointments after Congress adjourned—permitted the nominees to serve in their jobs. Boyd is the only one who could not draw a pay check—because the 1947 session of the Eightieth Congress left his job officially unfilled.

Quesada Heads Reserve Drive

Lieut. Gen. Elwood R. (Pete) Quesada, one-time McKinley Tech quarterback, has been appointed "head coach" of the Air Force Reserve expansion program.

Quesada

He was named yesterday to fill the new post created on orders from President Truman several weeks ago. Stressing the importance of the reserves, the President directed Defense Secretary Forrestal to redouble efforts to strengthen this arm, and asked the appointment of an "active, capable, high-ranking officer" in each service to head the program.

Quesada, who is only 44, now commands the USAF Tactical Air Force, with headquarters at Langley Field, Va. Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, his present deputy, will become acting commander of TAC.

In his new post, Quesada will serve as a special assistant to the Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, for civilian components. The latter include both the Air Reserve and Air National Guard.

A prominent athlete at Tech High a quarter of a century ago, Pete Quesada later attended Maryland and Georgetown Universities and became a flying cadet in 1924. A "hot" pilot even today, he was one of the "Question Mark" fliers who set a world endurance record in the late 1920s.

During the war, he commanded the Twelfth Fighter Command in North Africa and the Ninth Fighter Command in England. He set up advance headquarters on the Normandy beachhead the day after D-Day, providing aerial cover for the invasion. Later he commanded the Ninth Tactical Air Force, giving close support to the Allied armies moving across France and Germany, serving almost until VE-Day.

Since early 1946 he has commanded the Air Force's tactical units, developing joint air-ground operations.

Archbishop O'Boyle Honored

persevering in the same traditions, the church adapts herself to changed conditions and makes her home in new places," he said. "The Archbishop of Washington derives his spiritual jurisdiction through an ancient ritual, but he directs it to the needs of a new century and a new world capital."

Mass Celebrated

Robed in the golden vestments of his office, the Apostolic Delegate celebrated the pontifical mass and offered prayers for Pope Pius XII and for peace. At the conclusion of the mass, the Archbishop was vested in full pontifical mass vestments.

Kneeling before the altar, he renewed the oath of allegiance to the Pope he took at the time of his consecration as bishop. The Apostolic Delegate then placed the white pallium on his shoulders and the Archbishop, invested with the symbol of full metropolitan powers, gave his blessing to the congregation and mounted to the pulpit for his sermon.

During the mass and the ceremony of vesting for the reception of the pallium, the 32-voice choir of the Sulpician Seminary of Catholic University sang.

"The pallium which has been bestowed upon me this morning is, literally, a soft and gentle yoke, marked with significant crosses, and sent forth from the touch of the tomb of Saint Peter, first Vicar of Jesus Christ," the Archbishop said in his sermon.

"It is a mark of unique dignity and responsibility in the church, for it is a symbol of the sharing of service in a spiritual task with the successor of Saint Peter," he continued.

It is an honor to the Archdiocese to be acknowledged in this "sacred and traditional way," the Archbishop declared in his sermon.

"I rejoice particularly because it is a great hour for the church in Maryland with its 300 years of Catholicism," Archbishop O'Boyle said. "There is no more apostolic story in any land than that of the early pioneers of Catholicism in Maryland, no more brilliant record of holy zeal and courage," he asserted.

He paid tribute also to the "truly magnificent" work done in the archdiocese, mentioning the multiplication of parishes and churches, the work of Georgetown and Catholic Universities, "the strong fibered Catholicism of a well-instructed laity" and the work of brothers and sisters in institutions of learning, charity and healing.

Speaking on the unity of the church, Archbishop O'Boyle declared that "the only society that is capable of embracing the whole of mankind, crossing all barriers, is what Saint Augustine has rightly called the City of God, the Church of Christ."

"Utopian Dream"

"The conception of a society which will embrace mankind and nothing but mankind is a utopian dream and a political phantasy," he declared.

Pope Pius XII "presents himself today as the alert guardian of human rights and human dignity, a voice of defiance against those who would betray these inner holies of a man," Archbishop O'Boyle stated.

"I can pledge to our Holy Father Pius XII, gloriously reigning, the fidelity and obedience of every true son and daughter of the Archdiocese of Washington," he said.

"To the pontiff," he concluded, "we of Washington promise by our Catholic thoughts, words, and deed, to uphold his hands in all spheres of Catholic action, to support his world-wide charities for the war-stricken, to support his missions throughout the world, to pray and work with him for a true and lasting peace, to pray for him, and above all, we promise to stand fast in the unity of the faith of Christ."

Storm Hits Cape, Veers to Sea

Cape Hatteras, N. C., Nov. 10 (AP).—A late-season hurricane apparently was blowing itself out at sea off Cape Hatteras tonight.

After brushing this Atlantic "graveyard" area with high winds and heavy seas, the tropical storm veered seaward and appeared shortly after nightfall to be blowing itself out.

A 6:15 p. m. (EST) advisory from the United States Weather Bureau at Miami said available reports indicated the storm had diminished in force and was becoming an area of heavy squalls about 75 miles east of Cape Hatteras. It was moving then north northeastward about 21 miles an hour.

Maximum winds were estimated at 60 miles an hour, with gales extending out 100 miles to the east and north of the center.

Storm warnings remained up from Cape Hatteras to the Virginia Capes but were lowered south of here, where winds up to 80 miles an hour had threatened earlier.

Musicians' Union Asks Clark to Rule On New Contract

The American Federation of Musicians and the eight leading manufacturers of musical recordings asked Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday for a ruling on the legality of their proposed new contract which would end the 11-month A. F. of M. ban on recordings.

A delegation of attorneys representing both sides in the prolonged dispute left at the Attorney General's office copies of both a proposed general contract and a special welfare fund agreement.

Apparently the specific question on which a ruling is sought is whether the welfare fund provisions are in accord with the Taft-Hartley Act. The act forbids payments by employers to employes' representatives, but specifically exempts such welfare funds as proposed in the musicians' contract.

On its face, according to lawyers familiar with the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, the welfare fund agreement is entirely legal. It is very unlikely, however, that the parties will get a ruling from the Attorney General, for his function is to advise the Government only. Interpretation of laws for private parties is a function of their counsel.

Dropping of School Case Seen Likely

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Horace T. Morrison, King George County School Board attorney, today said he believes contempt of court action against the board in a school equalization case may be dropped.

The school board is expected to act on a series of agreements reached between Morrison and attorneys for Negro pupils in the county.

Among the agreements is a provision to restore immediately the remaining two of the five courses dropped from the curriculum of the white county high school last week. The courses were dropped as a technical way of making the curricula of white and Negro schools the same.

"We expect to have those courses back on the curriculum by tomorrow night," Morrison said as he left the chambers of Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson.

He said resumption of contempt proceedings, brought by Negro attorneys against the board in the absence of what they termed "substantial" equalization, tentatively set for December 6.

"But if our school board and our school superintendent do certain things tomorrow," Morrison said, "there will be no need for these hearings."

He said restoration of the two courses to the white school curriculum was among the "certain things." He said school authorities will be asked Thursday to give attention to restoring the courses.

The two courses—chemistry and biology—were among five struck from the curriculum in the county's only white high school last week in what board members construed as a technical move to equalize the curriculum with that of the county's only Negro school.

Morrison said the board acted on advice of Circuit Judge Leon M. Bazile, who told them they could comply with the Federal order by either raising the Negro course of study or lowering the white course to a par with those of Negro schools.

Tuck Defies Washington; Says He'll Fight for Segregation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Governor Tuck today told the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation he opposes the mingling of white and Negro school children, and criticized school consolidation when it goes "too far."

"I am opposed to Negro and white children going to school together in Virginia," the Governor said, "and I am opposed to the abolition of segregation in any form in this State.

"I will continue to work to that end—regardless of sentiment in Washington."

The Governor said, however, he favored providing adequate facilities for Negro school children.

Noting the trend toward school consolidation, especially in the rural areas of the State, Governor Tuck said he thought consolidation could be carried to the extreme.

"Concrete and mortar don't educate people, and you can't educate them in school buses," he said. The Governor added he intends to "find out soon how much of our school funds are being spent on school bus transportation."

Catholic Schools Told To Work With States

Roman Catholic school leaders were urged yesterday by auxiliary Bishop James T. O'Dowd of San Francisco to develop friendly working relationships with State school authorities to better understand the rules to be observed.

Bishop O'Dowd told the annual meeting of superintendents of the National Catholic Educational Association that Catholics recognize the State's right to regulate certain activities of the church's schools including attendance, safety and health.

Man Accused Of Attack on Little Girl

Montgomery County police yesterday held a man without bond on charges of rape and sodomy involving an 8-year-old Silver Spring girl.

Detective Sergt. James Anderson of county police, identified the prisoner as David Allen Hamlet, 28, of Silver Spring. He does construction work for the girl's father and is a roomer in his home, police said.

According to Anderson, the girl told police she was assaulted between 10:30 and 11 p. m. November 5 in a bedroom when her father was absent.

The father, who is separated from the girl's mother, had been bowling and hired a 12-year-old boy as baby-sitter. Before returning the boy to his nearby home, the father told police, he and Hamlet had one glass of beer.

The father then took the boy home, leaving Hamlet in the house with his daughter and two other children.

Big U. S. Air Might Demonstration Ends

Eglin Field, Fla., Nov. 10 (AP).—A costly demonstration of the powerful blows which America's air arm can strike in cooperation with ground troops ended today.

For six weeks, Air Force, Navy and Marine planes hurled tons of bombs and rockets into a square mile of earth before changing groups of military school students.

The exercise, Operation Combine III, was designed to indoctrinate future armed force generals and admirals in the decisive role which air cooperation can play in an attack.

The statistics tell the importance which United States military leaders attached to the indoctrination. Five hundred planes and 8000 men took part. A total of 3600 students were brought to Eglin from all over the country for three-day stays.

Five ground soldiers were killed and 16 injured when a stick of bombs fell among them during a dress rehearsal for the operation. Training and transportation accidents caused perhaps 15 more fatalities.

Antisubmarine Tests

Boston, Nov. 10 (AP).—Fighting ships of the United States Second Task Fleet headed toward Arctic waters today after participating in maneuvers off Argentia, Newfoundland, during which assault marines made successful beach landings.

Pacific War

Jap Conquest Plan for Asia Drawn in '40

Tokyo (Thursday), Nov. 11 (NYHT).—The over-all plan for Japanese conquest of southeast Asia by aggressive war in the Pacific was completed in September and October of 1940, or more than a year before the attack on Pearl Harbor, in the judgment of the international military tribunal for the Far East.

By January 1941, the court's judgment pointed out, Japan was printing military currency for use in the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Malaya. The plan for the sneak attack on the United States fleet at Pearl Harbor was ready by July 1941, and even before that Japan had given assurance to Germany that she was preparing to deprive the United States of her Pacific bases if the United States entered the European war.

Reading of the court's verdict will be continued today, although an Armistice Day holiday is being observed by all other branches of the Allied occupation forces. It is believed the judgment will be finished by Saturday. Sentencing of defendants found guilty is scheduled for early next week.

Insect Wing Dust Blisters Ship Crewmen in Caribbean

Rome, Nov. 10 (AP).—Poisonous dust from the wings of butterflies caused strange blisters on crewmen of the American tanker Saguard, it was reported today.

The men were cured by treatment prescribed by radio from Rome's International Radio Medical Center, Director Guido Guida of the institute said, after the ship's captain wired the center for help.

The tanker sailed from Venezuela October 27 for Sweden. The butterflies flew about the ship in the Caribbean. The men, after a week at sea, complained of blisters, sores and high fever.

(In New York, the American Museum of Natural History entomology department said the blisters probably came from moths and not butterflies. Merely the touch of some moths causes skin rashes. The museum said this is common with a species of moths that range in size from an inch wingspread to 2½ inches.)

Lewis Will Bargain; Court Withdraws Order

Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday withdrew an order that John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers must bargain with the Southern Coal Producers Association.

Goldsborough issued the order during the coal contract dispute last spring. Lewis obeyed it, and has agreed to bargain with the association in the future.

Attorneys for the National Labor Relations Board asked the court to dissolve the injunction in view of the agreement.

Navy Looks for Sub Near Pearl Harbor

Pearl Harbor, Nov. 10 (AP).—Pacific Fleet Headquarters said today a naval vessel this morning reported evidence of a possible submarine contact 9 miles south of Pearl Harbor.

Other units have been directed to search the area. Headquarters said no verification of the presence of a submarine has been obtained.

A headquarters spokesman said a check was made before its announcement to ascertain that no American submarines were operating in the area.

Official Mule Mascot Of Democrats No More

Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 10 (AP).—Memo for Harry Truman, down in Key West:

Rosebud is dead.

Rosebud was the official mascot for the Democratic Party when it held its nominating convention last summer in Philadelphia. An obstinate but smart donkey, Rosebud carried on gallantly in the Quaker City, then came home to Las Vegas to await the election results.

Hard-bitten Republicans blame the death on heart failure, induced by the results.

Kemp Overridden In Board Clash

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Fletcher Kemp, Arlington's school superintendent for the past 28 years, clashed openly last night with the county's first elected school board.

The clash came during a board meeting when Kemp refused to concur immediately in a board move to set up a new post of associate superintendent of schools—a job that would take many of Kemp's duties from him.

A resolution asking appointment of Dr. Edward J. Braun, present school consultant, to the post also criticized delays and poor coordination in school administration.

Despite Kemp's objection that

he wanted "time to study" the resolution and the new job, it was unanimously approved by the board and Braun was appointed to it.

The adopted resolution, proposed by Board Member O. Glenn Stahl, stated among other things that negotiations for four elementary school sites badly needed for next fall "have not been completed despite the fact that these sites were selected and approved" by the board as long as several months ago.

In addition, the resolution said, the board has been furnished insufficient data regarding past and future expenditures and needs central coordination to control spending under its budget. Many "minor but urgent repairs" on school buildings have not been made although budget provisions had been made for a larger maintenance staff, the resolution stated further.

Stahl declared that the operation of the school education program takes a "large portion" of the superintendent's time without considering the business end of the job.

He proposed, and the board agreed, that Dr. Braun handle the maintenance and operation of the school plants, construction and site selection for new buildings, supply purchase and budget preparation, accounting and control.

According to Superintendent Kemp, there were "two or three things" in the resolution that were "confusing to me." He declared that the selection of sites was "going on as fast as possible."

Before the controversy arose, Kemp had been scheduled to recommend Dr. Braun for the new post. However, after the resolution was read criticizing some phases of his administrative program, Kemp announced "I withdraw my recommendation." He added that he had no personal objections to Dr. Braun.

Harvester Executive To Head Austria ECA

Clyde N. King, 62, International Harvester Co. executive, has been named permanent head of the Economic Cooperation Administration's mission to Austria, it was announced yesterday.

King, a native of Springfield, Mo., succeeds Westmore Willcox, who has been temporary head of the mission since August 23. Willcox is returning to his New York City firm of Westmore Willcox, Inc.

King has been vice president, export sales manager and director of foreign operations for International Harvester.

Colleges Hit Rating Influence

By The Associated Press

The Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities condemned what it called "undue influence" exerted over educational policy by accrediting organizations.

By resolution it invited four other educational groups to join with it in setting up a committee to restore to the colleges and universities themselves all power over accreditation.

Chancellor R. G. Gustavson of the University of Nebraska said the accrediting situation is such that university administrators tend to become "merely local representatives of accrediting organizations in the specialized professional fields."

Groups invited to join in the reforming move are the Association of American Universities, the National Association of State Universities, the Association of American Colleges and the Association of Urban Universities. The American Council on Education, the United States Office of Education and other groups also would be asked to sit with the group.

Earlier in the day officials were told by an ECA official that the European recovery program is "showing every sign of success."

Bunche Proposes Negev Truce Area

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP). — Acting United Nations Mediator Ralph Bunche submitted a plan today for making Palestine's southern Negev desert a virtual no-man's-land.

Bunche laid his plan before a closed meeting of a Security Council committee that is considering ways to implement a resolution taken up by the Council November 4.

This resolution threatened U. N. sanctions if Israeli forces did not withdraw to the positions held when the Negev fighting flared October 14.

Israel now holds most of the Negev. Under Bunche's plan, Israeli troops would give up most of the territory they wrested from the Egyptians.

This area then would be demilitarized and patrolled by U. N. observers placed at key points in the desert.

The main purpose of the Bunche proposal, it was explained by a U. N. spokesman, is to keep Israeli and Egyptian forces as far apart as possible until an armistice can be reached.

Bunche's plan was given to the committee—made up of the five big powers plus Colombia and Belgium—for advice and comment. At the suggestion of Soviet delegate Jacob A. Malik, the body adjourned until Friday to study it.

U. N. Commission Accuses Israel of Truce Breach

Tel Aviv, Nov. 10 (NYHT).—The United Nations Truce Commission accused Israel tonight of flagrant truce breach in the capture of Iraq Suweidan police fortress and in the arrest of two U. N. officers who sought to observe the battle.

The commission declared that the Israeli army had to attack "with full force" yesterday to drive the Egyptians out of the encircled fortress east of Majdal. It asserted that observers saw one American Flying Fortress and two fighter-type planes pass over the Egyptian pocket and apparently bomb it.

U. N. to Call Balkan Parley On Greece's Border Troubles

Paris, Nov. 10 (AP).—The U. N. Assembly's Political Committee voted unanimously tonight to convene immediately a little Balkan conference to see what can be done about conciliation of Greece's troubles with her northern neighbors.

The delegates cheered at the rare spectacle of unanimity.

The resolution asked H. V. Evatt of Australia, Assembly president; Paul-Henri Spaak, Premier of Belgium and chairman of the Political Committee; Selim Sarper of Turkey, rapporteur of the committee, and Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary general, to act as conciliators.

They are to convene immediately a conference of representatives of Albania, Bulgaria, Greece and Yugoslavia to see what can be done about reaching a settlement.

The committee then rejected a Polish resolution to kill the special U. N. Commission on Balkans, which has a watchdog role over violations of Greece's northern borders in Communist efforts to overthrow the Athens government.

This was after the committee had approved a United States-British-French-Chinese resolution to extend the life of the commission and condemn Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria for aiding the guerillas.

The committee also rejected a Soviet resolution for withdrawal of all foreign military personnel from Greece—including the American aid mission.

Sophoulis Rejects Compromise Proposal

Athens, Nov. 10 (AP).—Premier Themistokles Sophoulis tonight said any compromise with the Communist-led guerillas would mean "submission to a force unworthy of the Greek people."

He said such action would mean more bloodshed instead of an end to the warfare in the North, and the eventual destruction of the Greek race.

Sophoulis made the statement in reply to an open letter from eight former Greek cabinet members asking support for an Australian proposal for peace negotiations with Greece's Communist neighbors in the north.

The premier said conciliation with the guerillas was impossible, but that he still offered amnesty to all who lay down their arms.

Hearing For Condon

The often-promised, never-held hearing for Dr. Edward U. Condon before the House Un-American Activities Committee has been postponed again. Electoral and juridical inroads on the committee's Republican membership have forced a decision to suspend operations until next January. Among the actions affected was the tentatively scheduled opportunity for the head of the Bureau of Standards to answer the charge of being "one of the weakest links" in the Nation's atomic security.

Condon's case symbolizes to the scientists of the United States the unwarranted suspicions that have been cast upon them as a group by sensation-seeking spy hunters. In consequence of this and other demonstrations of insecurity of name and reputation in Government employ, the scientific fraternity is discouraged from working in critical research fields in—and even out of—Government. The Condon case, both as a symbol and as a matter of personal justice, is so important that it should be made the first order of business when the Un-American Activities Committee resumes activities with a Democratic majority.

Price Support Costs

Although the world is still clamoring for more food and Americans are complaining bitterly of the size of their grocery bills, the Federal Government is facing the prospect of substantial outlays next year to hold off the market "surplus" products, such as wheat, corn, cotton and other agricultural crops. This seemingly paradoxical situation is the result of our agricultural price support program which puts a floor under the prices of basic farm products equal to 90 per cent of parity (in the case of cotton 96½ per cent for this year's crop). Record-breaking crop yields have already reduced wheat, corn and cotton prices to support levels. As price support loans that are unredeemed fall due or agreements to purchase have to be met, Government expenditures will of course rise. From present indications the 1949 cost of the support program will be quite heavy.

This 90 per cent of parity support program will continue, moreover, with minor changes, until the end of June, 1950, for basic commodities, that is, for wheat, corn, cotton (for which the support will be lowered to 90 per cent), tobacco, rice, and peanuts. Supports for various so-called "Steagall" commodities will also be maintained at 90 per cent of parity until January, 1950. Consequently very definite limits have been set by legislation to price declines in food costs during the coming year or more, with the notable exception of livestock products still far above support levels.

With public interest focused on the effect of the price support program on living costs, the expense of the program to the Government has received comparatively little attention. Recently, however, a number of Federal Reserve System publications have devoted considerable space to analyses of agricultural price support legislation, its effect on credit and its fiscal impact. The reason why an understanding of this legislation is important not only to farmers and consumers but to taxpayers and bankers is well summed up in the October Monthly Review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank. It warns that "price support for this year's crops may necessitate the spending, lending, or pledging of hundreds of millions of dollars. To the extent this program involves expenditures of public funds, the Treasury's cash surplus will be reduced, further weakening an important anti-inflationary weapon. And finally, and perhaps most important, is the concern of the public with the present level of prices and the maintenance of economic stability." It might be added that the end result of this support program might be to leave the Government in possession of large stored stocks of farm products that only another war or further doses of inflation would enable it to dispose of without incurring heavy losses and disrupting the artificial price structure it had been striving to maintain.

It should in fairness be pointed out that the farm price support program has, barring minor exceptions, not been responsible for the soaring food costs of recent years since prices of most farm products have until lately been well above support levels. In fact, as the New York Reserve Bank notes, it is quite possible that the encouragement to production given by the war and postwar price support program may have resulted in keeping prices lower than they would have been without price support pledges. Moreover, moderate forms of price support afford justified protection against the danger of uncontrolled deflation that might restore the unbalanced price relationships between agricultural and other products that produced profound agricultural depression in prewar years.

But the situation today is radically different from that of the prewar period. Far-reaching changes in demand for farm products, in farm production methods and costs call for extensive changes in the present price support program. Unfortunately the pattern has been set for the coming year and a half. When and if the so-called permanent program becomes effective, the situation should be improved. Probably the most to be hoped for is that the incoming Congress will not repudiate the work of the Eightieth Congress in formulating a long range program that, while far from perfect, is much more in accord with the needs of the present day than the system we now have.

The Why Of Victory

The reader inquest that has been in progress since election day has yielded some interesting reflections. Some correspondents feel that the election all along was in the bag for Truman. He was, in other words, the beneficiary either of Roosevelt spadework or of a Leftist trend in the world which has now overtaken America. We don't find this a satisfactory explanation of events. We agree, rather, with other correspondents who say that Mr. Truman profited from a groundswell. Some say that the turn came in the polling booths themselves, with millions of voters changing their minds when confronted with the actual choice. The theory of a groundswell has historical precedent and is adhered to by practical politicians. Al Smith used to say that all presidential elections are determined by a trend, and that this trend is not discernible till late October.

However, even if the theory of a groundswell be acceptable, something or somebody must have started it. We believe it was Mr. Truman himself. Most of the letters which have been flooding our mailbag tell us only what gave the victorious candidates blocks of votes. Price support for farmers, general prosperity, opposition to Taft-Hartley Act—these are listed as reasons for the Truman support. We may accept them all as determinants of votes for Mr. Truman, but, in our opinion, they don't account for victory, either singly or put together. No matter how complicated a situation, there is always a keypoint, and it is this keypoint that requires to be isolated. Some correspondents say: people. But 21 million people voted for Governor Dewey, and the 2-million-margin is, surely, evidence that the keypoint is not simply people. The keypoint, in our opinion, was attack. This was Mr. Truman's secret weapon, a weapon that Governor Dewey, forgetting his use of it in Oregon (a State that, incidentally, he carried) in his debate with Stassen, left to rust during his campaigning.

This theory is supported by men close to Mr. Truman in his campaign. Not many of them thought that he would win, but they did see a turn in the tide after the Truman speech at Denver on September 20. Here he lambasted the Eightieth Congress with a vigor that impressed the whole of the Far West. Those Democrat lieutenants who were ahead of him, preparing the way for the candidate's tour, felt the impact immediately. As one of them said, "The Democracy became one after that, and we found a unity in the towns ahead of us, where back of us the Democracy had been riven in factions." Mr. Truman himself seemed to realize that he had struck the right note, and he proceeded to play upon it from that time on. He even pushed Governor Dewey into defending the Eightieth Congress, sans qualification or specification.

If this is correct, the result was less ideological than tactical. Gradually, as Mr. Truman kept pounding on this note of the iniquities of the Eightieth Congress, he developed a personality to the electorate. He became the kind of fighter that the American people love—a man who comes up from behind and shows a fighting quality and a will to win. Meanwhile the Dewey personality was left dim and insubstantial. It seems to us that this contrast of a personality and a nopersonality stared the undecided in the face when they entered the polling booth, and that they then voted for the familiar and recognizable. In other words, the idea that Mr. Truman is the heir of Mr. Roosevelt, or the beneficiary of some wave of the future, does not, in our opinion, hold water. It was Mr. Truman the fighter who won, and we think the inquest need go no further in accounting for the miracle.

Mr. Eliot's Prize

Considering that Mr. T. S. Eliot has been the most widely praised and admired poet of his time, the award to him of the Nobel prize in literature, which has been bestowed on so many writers of lesser reputation, seems somewhat belated. Mr. Eliot's more recent work has been in criticism and he has published nothing of importance in poetry since the Four Quartets of 1943. And after so many years of ascendancy his influence is now said to be in eclipse among the present generation of esthetic young men who teach English courses in our colleges and universities.

The rise of Mr. Eliot to sudden celebrity with the publication of The Waste Land in the early 1920s marked the beginning of a general revolt from the convention of sophisticated prettiness which had prevailed among the Georgian poets. The new fashion was toward more cerebration and less music, toward an intricate and erudite symbolism, the substitution of free rhythm for metrical rhythm and of assonance for rhyme, and the increasing use of poetry as an instrument of satire and social criticism. There was also an effort to give to images and symbols several simultaneous planes of association, so that a poem whose full meaning was evident at first reading came to be deemed a failure. The result was that poetry became a kind of hieratic language intelligible only to a cultivated few, and the divorce between poetry and the people, which had been in progress since the esthetic movement of the 1890s, now became complete.

Armistice, 1948

Nothing is more apparent on this Armistice Day than the fact that the world is in the stage of an armistice and not a peace. Only if and when the issues that animate the cold war are resolved can we reach the international balance and stability that make for peace. Therefore, the most useful purpose to which this Armistice Day can be put is an examination of why we lost the peace of which it was the harbinger and why the peace we fought for in this war has not yet materialized.

If the history of the decades between wars is anything, it is a history of evasion of responsibility. We allowed ourselves to be convinced—wrongly—that war is the worst evil, and then we did nothing to prevent war. We refused to accept a world responsibility consistent with our world position. World War II brought a profound change. Isolationism, not dead, is in discard. We have accepted a primary responsibility in the United Nations. We have undergone another awakening. International pledges are significant, we have found, only when there is fundamental agreement on the meaning of words. Ideals of international justice take shape only as we implement them. The determinant of peace is power—either international power, or, until a sublimation of sovereignty can be achieved, national power applied to international objectives. We are rebuilding our armed forces accordingly.

Today's need is for a course between the twin reefs of illusion and despair—between the counsel of those who believe all difficulties can be removed by wishing, and those who would doom us to a "preventive" atomic war. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who is proving himself as sound a philosopher as soldier, had some pertinent words on this point in his speech yesterday in Boston. "If we become engaged in an atom-bomb race," he asserted, "we may simply lull ourselves to sleep behind an atomic stockpile. The way to win an atomic war is to make certain it never starts." General Bradley has no simple remedy for the ethical vacuum in which "we have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount." But disillusionment, he recognizes, "is always the enemy of peace. And today—as after World War I—disillusionment can come from expecting too much, too easily, too soon. In our impatience we must never forget that fundamental differences have divided the world; they allow no swift, no cheap, no easy solutions." Though the dream of peace is still clouded on this Armistice Day, the important thing is not to lose the dream.

Spoils In Congress

Reports that a general "house cleaning" of congressional employes is contemplated with the shift from Republican to Democratic control is very disturbing to sponsors of the Congressional Reorganization Act. It is to be expected, of course, that patronage jobs will change hands. Congress ought to shake itself loose from the patronage system, as the executive branch has largely done. Until it does so by law, neither party can afford to give up the petty spoils of clerkships, doorkeepers, elevator operators and so forth. The tragedy of the turnover which is being predicted is that it may extend to the professional staffs granted to numerous committees under the La Follette-Monroney reform program.

All the experts hired by the committees under the 1946 act are supposed to have been selected on the basis of merit without reference to partisanship. Although the caliber of men chosen varies from committee to committee, many of them are clearly in the expert category, and many have rendered nonpartisan service. In some instances, undoubtedly, these well-paid positions went to patronage hunters, and in these cases there can be little argument against replacement of the incumbents. The grave danger is that there will be wholesale replacements. In that event, the Republicans would be almost certain to repeat the performance the next time they get in power. The result would be to undermine this part of the reform program and give Congress the service of political hacks instead of professionally trained men.

In the executive branch, the civil service has traditionally grown chiefly by covering into the merit system employes appointed on a patronage basis. It would be far better for congressional committees to keep a few partisan appointees on the job than to indulge in wholesale dismissals which would discourage men of training and objectivity from seeking these jobs in the future.

MIRRORS

How still it is beneath all sound,
How dark it is beneath all light
How grave it is beneath all laughter,
How true beneath all fright.

All things live by more than here,
All things stir with more than now:
There is no mercy in the deer,
Serene as Jove's the lion's brow . . .

It is a false and shallow vision
That finds but one face in the glass—
Robbing the snowstorm of its flowers,
The fierce rose of its mass.

It is a false and shallow mirror
That shows but wrong or right;
Robbing the bride of her despair,
The doomed of their delight.

State Issues

I presume I represent a rather large block of voters residing in the environs of Washington who arrived at the polls on election day and were confronted for the first time with the names of their State candidates for office and what issues were being put up to the voters.

I happen to reside in nearby Maryland, and I'm probably a rather average reader of The Washington Post. When I came to vote, I found listed two State candidates for Congress and nine questions concerning State or county constitutional changes of which I was completely unaware.

The questions were cloaked in such legal language as to make it impossible to decide quickly what the issue was and what a yes or no vote meant. Consequently, with the information I had I could simply vote for a presidential candidate and leave completely blank my vote on the State candidate or issues. I know there are places other than newspapers where one can become informed about issues at stake on which voters must decide, and I feel reasonably competent to judge such issues when sufficient facts are available.

Unfortunately, those of us who work in the District of Columbia and reside in nearby Maryland or Virginia do not readily have access to the media of information existing in other parts of these States.

I realize the solution in my own case, if I wish to vote reasonably on State questions, is to do a little research prior to election day. I certainly do not like the situation which I have described.

Maybe some of your readers would have suggestions as to how the citizenry outside the range of newspapers which present State issues might become better informed about these, or maybe if ignorance is bliss 'tis better to remain that way.

LEROY VOR'S

Editor's Note: The Maryland Congressional contests both in the area and throughout the State were covered fully by staff writers who toured the State. The names of the candidates were published many times. Their names were repeated daily during the three days before election as a public service. As for the seven constitutional amendments and one referendum, The Washington Post carried stories about them on at least two separate occasions.

"Higher Transit"

This is to request E. P. W. (letter published November 8) to cease lumping the Americans for Democratic action with Harry R. Booth of the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection. After following the hearings, it seems apparent to me that all Booth did was to insure a fare increase. His tactics were disruptive more than enlightening, consisting of fulminations and opinions rather than facts and evidence. He made of himself a excellent "straw man" for the company counsel to knock down.

The Washington Post's November 2 editorial did much to clear the air on the consumer committee's "public" ownership chatter; The Washington Post could have cited the Detroit Department of Street Railways, municipally owned since about 1923, which is just about broke on its 13 cent fare, or the 13- and 15-cent fares set by Chicago Transit Authority. Both of these fare increases came long before Capital Transit applied for its, demonstrating that "economy" of city ownership which Benjamin C. Marsh (letter published November 8) so earnestly advocates.

However, the rising cost of transit here, when coupled with increasing delivery of new cars, may well cost Capital Transit a fair percentage of patrons. It may be time that the flat fare system be reexamined along the lines suggested by an article in "Bus Transportation" for September, 1948.

CHARLES J. MURPHY.

We won't get any more decent service out of Capital Transit until it asks for another price rise. I ride the 16th st. line every day, and Georgia and Alaska only runs about a third of the buses it had before the corporation won its victory over the people of Washington. It's cheaper to buy a car.

"Trick Or Treat"

The Commissioners and District of Columbia officials should enact a law to prohibit "beggar's night" at Hallowe'en. It is making gangsters of children. They say "trick or treat" and if we do not treat, they damage our property.

The police said there was nothing they could do to give us protection in our home from these beggars. If the parents of these children were fined not less than $25 for putting their children out to beg, they would entertain their children in their home.

"Responsibility Of Power"

May I congratulate you on your November 4 editorial on the broad scope of responsibility within which you ask the President to operate during his next Administration.

Perhaps one of the clearest delineations of the limits of responsibility in recent months is given in the report of the World Council of Churches on "The Church and the Disorder of Society." As published in The Washington Post September 3, the report declares:

"A responsible society is one where . . . those who hold political authority or economic power are responsible for its exercise to God and the people whose welfare is affected by it."

Our responsibility, in other words, is exactly coterminous with our power. There is no place in which we can exert power without answering for it, either to those affected by it, to the American people, or if those affected are too powerless to react, to history. However the corollary of this statement is not true. That is, we will not be able to exert our power in every situation where, for one reason or other we feel responsible, for, while we are powerful indeed, perhaps as powerful relatively as Britain in the nineteenth century, we are not all-powerful.

Therefore we must practice a certain economy in the use of our power, directing it to the most important things first, and not squandering it on side-issues or ideological fanaticisms. Perhaps first and foremost we have an obligation and responsibility to help keep the world out of war. Our honor is at stake, for if we go down as a civilization in an atomic cataclysm, it is not the Russians who will be blamed, or the French, but we, who having the power, stooped to misuse it, or were provoked into misusing it.

"Doing Something In China"

I have just finished reading an editorial of November 8 entitled "Doing Something in China," which suggests that arms and ammunition be provided to Gen. Fu Tso-yi. You state "General Fu can be supplied at his home base, which is Taiyuan-fu, capital of Shansi Province."

The only part of that statement that is correct is that Taiyuan-fu is the capital of Shansi. General Fu has had no connection at any time with Taiyuan-fu, which is held and has been held for almost 30 years by Yen Hsi-shan, the only remaining war lord in China. General Fu is the commander in Tientsin, Peiping and the north extending out to beyond Kalgan in Inner Mongolia and can be easily supplied by rail from Tientsin, if there were any supplies to be given him.

As you have published in your news columns, in spite of the aid voted by Congress not one rifle or one bullet has arrived in China. As Chiang Kai-shek did not receive any from us, as per your news columns, he would find it very difficult to divvy it up with General Fu. Possibly your editorial writer would be willing to explain how much General Fu would receive from a divvy up of no rifles and no ammunition.

ALFRED KOHLBERG,
Chairman, American China Policy Association.
New York.

Editor's Note: This is one of several letters raising the same point. Fu Tso-yi is a Shansi man by birth and loyalty. His patron is Yen Hsi-shan, semi-independent governor of Shansi, and it was under his semi-independent rule of north China in 1928 that Fu won his spurs, Yen making him garrison commander of Tientsin. Later, in 1931, he was made governor of Suiyuan Province, which abuts upon Shansi. In this position, Fu, of course, has an independent command, but the patron-protege relation—the tightest association in China—remains, and, on top of that, Fu and Yen are allies against the Communists.

We find no corroboration of Mr. Kohlberg's statement that no rifles and no ammunition have been received in China. Anyway different stories emanate from different official sources. Mr. Kohlberg is referring to the 125-million-dollar grant of military aid contained in the China Aid Act of 1948. But, assuming that Mr. Kohlberg is correct, this is the story of aid prior to that date given in the House report, February 20, 1948: Total value of lend-lease transfers to China prior to September 2, 1945 ("the bulk . . . military in character") $849,360,232; from that date to June 30, 1947, $777,638,292, of which 728 million dollars was of a military character; total, $1,626,998,524. This was all lend-lease. In addition, the report lists sales of military equipment and supplies, transfers of United States Navy vessels and craft, ammunition dumped and transferred by the departing Marines, and Navy transfers, though no figure as to cost is given.

Separate Powers

In your editorial of November 5 "The New Congress," you advocate an informal liasion group of Senators to act between Congress and the President. If you don't like our present mechanics of Government, why not openly advocate constitutional changes to bring about the desired results, rather than recommend an "off the record," behind-closed-doors operation? Without the open discussion of public issues, how can the voter determine whether he agrees with the politician's philosophy or not?

If the President would handle the executive affairs of Government instead of trying to legislate, if Congress would decide upon and enact needed legislation instead of conducting investigations into affairs which rightfully belong to the executive department, and if the judicial department would restrict itself to deciding whether or not the laws have been violated, rather than giving orders and initiating injunctions, I feel that our Government would operate more efficiently.

Gallinger Care

As a patient just released from Gallinger Hospital, I would like to say that Gallinger is a very fine hospital. No one should ever fear to be sent there.

The food is good and there is plenty of it. No one goes hungry in Gallinger unless he refuses to eat. The nurses and attendants are fine Christian women. The patients are very helpful and kind. It is very clean and cheerful there. The kitchen floor is clean enough to eat from.

Feeding Three Billion People

By Malvina Lindsay

World's No. 1 Worry

CAN THEY ever do it? Can these men with brief cases and sheafs of paper, with cardboard charts and graphs, going and coming from committee rooms and lecture halls in Washington this week, figure out a way to make human beings win in the global race with hunger?

These are the men from 18 nations—members of the World Food Council—who are charting next week's conference of the World Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. Each day they meet there are 55,000 more mouths to feed in the world. Each day as they prepare agendas for more food production the planet is racing toward a probable three billion inhabitants 50 years hence.

Unless these experts can work food production miracles, most of this predicted population will have to exist on coolie standards—which will ultimately spread to the United States. Can these men make bread out of stones, draw food out of air?

It can't be done, some population experts gloomily insist. There's not enough land and not enough time—unless human breeding is curbed. And there you run up against folkways and religions.

NEVERTHELESS, next week representatives of 57 nations will put their brains up against the challenge. Their world food conference will at least proclaim to the world that food anarchy—starvation's best ally—is largely over on this planet. For man for the first time in his history is now looking realistically at his resources and planning how he can make the most of them. The great majority of nations of the world are at last facing together their food problems and trying to do the most immediate thing that needs to be done — prevent surpluses, shortages and waste, work out a system of orderly marketing which would help the countries that overproduce as well as the have-nots.

That alone is a great strategic advance in the battle against hunger. And 50 or more projects that the Food and Agriculture Organization is carrying on are beginning to yield results. For example, the world-wide inoculation of cattle against disease is making it possible for many a primitive farmer in a potential famine area to escape loss of his chief agricultural capital, the ox with which he tills his fields. Another example is the increase of food resources in some countries by the introduction of hybrid corn seed.

ALL THIS may seem a puny attack on the advancing global starvation of which conservationists warn. But the World Food and Agriculture Organization is only three years old. It may develop better weapons, and bolder methods. The fact that it is functioning at all is more important than what it has accomplished to date. Even though the Soviet Union still remains outside, the 57 nations that have joined represent the beginning of mankind's first mobilization against hunger.

Leaders of this force are undaunted by the gains population is now making against food supplies. Their stand is that it is possible to feed the world, even in the face of this. Think, they say, what tremendous effect even today's scientific knowledge of agriculture would have if it were applied throughout the world. And who knows what the next 50 years will produce in knowledge as well as in people? Anyway there is nothing to do but to pitch in and fight with the means at hand an enemy whose threat makes that of the Kremlin, of depression, of the rascalities of opposite political parties, seem pale indeed.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Thomas Committee's Curse

THE SCORE on the House Un-American Activities Committee as of today stands: Chairman J. Parnell Thomas indicted by a Federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government; Representatives Richard B. Vail of Illinois and John McDowell of Pennsylvania defeated by the voters in their respective districts.

Childs

Representative Karl Mundt of South Dakota was elected to the Senate. This leaves only one Republican survivor unscathed. That is Representative Richard M. Nixon of California, who was reelected in a contest in which his only opponent was a Wallaceite.

This illustrates once again the high mortality rate of the members of a committee which has managed from the beginning to get into hot water and stay there. Of the members appointed when the committee was formed in 1938, Thomas is the only one to come through the storm and strife to the present.

The first chairman was Representative Martin Dies of Texas. In his swashbuckling, slapdash way, he set the pattern. With one eye on newspaper headlines and the other on the newsrel cameras, Dies ignored ordinary rules of procedure in a search for sensations.

Dies was defeated when he ran for the Senate in 1944. The votes of organized labor contributed substantially to that outcome.

FOUR OTHERS of the original members ultimately went down to defeat. This included former Representative Jerry Voorhis of California even though he had tried to curb some of the excesses that had brought sharp criticism. Representative Noah Mason of Illinois got off the committee and he has been returned at succeeding elections, including the one last week.

After he took over as chairman, Thomas succeeded in making Dies look like a sternly objective statesman. Behind the scenes, a cabal of newspapermen and informers really ran the committee, under the tutelage of the secretary, Robert E. Stripling. Stripling, interestingly enough, has survived while the Congressmen he coached and prodded went down to disaster and oblivion.

Criticism of the committee came not merely from labor and the Left. By its methods the committee seemed determined to punish as well as to investigate and expose. Americans of conservative opinion felt that here was an attempt by Congress to usurp the functions of the courts.

Individual cases brought wide indignation. Thus Dr. Edward U. Condon, head of the Bureau of Standards, was smeared in a public statement and yet, in spite of his repeated requests, never given a chance to answer the vague charges publicly made against him.

Thomas is a man of dark suspicions and inquisitorial temperament. He has a kind of self-righteousness which persuades him that he is saving the Republic from imminent danger.

TWO YEARS before the Republican sweep of 1946, a Democratic House voted to give the committee permanent status as a standing committee. Southern Democrats combined with Republicans and the vote was 208 to 186 over the indignant protests of those who felt this was blanket approval for outrageous committee procedure.

In the new Congress there certainly will be a strenuous attempt to wipe out the Un-American Committee. Many incoming Democrats will take it as part of their mandate to try to eliminate it.

Democratic leaders in the House will be sympathetic to such a move, but they are not optimistic over its success. Southern Democrats seem certain to vote to continue it and so will old-line Republicans.

If the committee is continued, the chairman will be Representative John S. Wood of Georgia. At his home in Canton, Ga., Wood said he favored continuing the committee, believing it has an important function to perform.

"We can run it without witch hunts," he said. "We can treat people fairly and proceed in an orderly way. I was chairman of the committee from July of '45 to January of '47 and I didn't hear much criticism then."

If the committee is to perform any sort of useful function, it will have to overcome the serious handicap of its past reputation. One of the first steps would be to eliminate Stripling.

At least two new Republicans must be appointed. Given the committee reputation for disaster and oblivion, something like the curse of King Tut's tomb as advertised by the Sunday supplements, it may be hard to find two new victims.

Wages Lag Behind Prices, BLS Reports; New Rise Seen

The Government reported yesterday that wages still were lagging behind the cost of living, while a major watch manufacturer prepared to lay off 1000 employes because of high wages.

New wage demands, meanwhile, were developing and the National Foremen's Institute said "a few fourth round buds are beginning to bloom." The institute, devoted to industrial research, said an average increase of 9½ cents an hour was found in a survey of 600 new labor contracts.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Labor Department reported that the first three general increases since VJ-Day totalled 43 per cent. However, the BLS said, actual pay received by factory employes increased an average of 30 per cent a week and 33 per cent an hour in that period and 'rising prices have more than offset the increases in gross weekly and hourly earnings."

In nonmanufacturing industries, the agency found, wage increases have varied considerably. It reported that hourly wages in retail stores rose 38 per cent but in financial establishments only 23 per cent.

At Waterbury, Conn., the Associated Press reported, the U. S. Time Corp. said 1000 employes would be laid off by January 1. Layoff notices were given 285 Tuesday and 400 more will be served with notices today.

"We are faced with a wage level which has risen to a point where drastic curtailment in our working force is our only alternative," said Joachim Lehmkul, company president.

At Chicago, according to the Associated Press, railroad management yesterday began citing to a presidential fact-finding board its opposition to wage demands of 16 nonoperating unions. The unions are asking 48 hours' pay for 40 hours work, time and one-half with a minimum of 12 hours' pay for Saturday work, double time with a minimum of 16 hours' pay for Sundays and holidays.

New Setback

NLRB Rules UEW Union Pact Illegal

By the United Press

The United Electrical Workers (CIO), whose bargaining rights in atomic plants have been withdrawn, was dealt another setback yesterday in a National Labor Relations Board ruling casting doubt on the legality of almost all of the union's maintenance of membership contracts.

The board held that the union's contract with General Electric Co. at the San Jose, Calif., plant is illegal. It said the contract contains a maintenance of membership provision that was included without first holding a union shop election as required by the Taft-Hartley law.

"For this reason, and without regard to any other considerations," the board said, "we find that the contract, even if renewed, cannot serve as a bar to a present determination of representatives."

The union has a similar contract for almost all of General Electric's 100,000 employes and more than 100,000 other workers employed by Westinghouse Electric Corp., General Motors Corp. and Radio Corp. of America.

Under the board's decision, all of these contracts can be challenged by any raiding union.

In the San Jose case, the board overruled the CIO union and General Electric. Both parties argued that their contract had renewed itself automatically on January 1, 1948. The agreement was made originally on April 1, 1946, to end a long strike.

The company and union claimed that the contract, as renewed, prevented an election requested by the International Association of Machinists, which is seeking to represent machine shop employes at the California plant.

But the board disagreed. An election in 30 days was ordered.

The refusal of officers of the CIO union to sign non-Communist affidavits means that the United Electrical Workers will not even appear on the ballot in the contest with the machinists.

This failure to file affidavits and the "alleged Communist affiliation" of some union officers caused the Atomic Energy Commission to order bargaining rights withdrawn and withheld from United Electrical Workers in atomic plants.

McCloy to Leave Next Week for Central America

John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, will leave next Thursday for a month-long visit to Central America, the Bank announced yesterday.

The Bank said McCloy's purpose is "to acquaint himself with the economic and development problems of the Central American members of the Bank."

Corn Estimate Up 82 Million Bushels

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's corn crop gets bigger with each Government report.

Estimates of the Crop Reporting Board yesterday raised the already fantastic figures announced on October 10 another 82 million bushels.

According to the official estimates a crop is now assured of 3650 million bushels. This is 400 million bushels, or 12 per cent, greater than the former all-time record of 1946.

For each 2 bushels of corn harvested last year 3 bushels are being harvested this fall. Last year's total crop was 2400 million bushels.

Wheat Estimate Holds

Estimates for wheat are unchanged from last month, or 1284 million bushels—the second highest in history. Reports from the great winter wheat area of the Southern Great Plains indicate that prospects for next year are even better. Last year at this time the Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado fields were suffering from drought. This year rains have provided sufficient moisture to carry seed to germination earlier and in better condition than prevailed in 1947.

Yesterday's crop report should furnish President Truman with a good basis for his Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Plenty of Potatoes Again

The aggregate of all crops is 11 percentage points above the previous high mark set in 1946. Here are some of the official reports:

"Improvement . . . in the yield . . . assured the largest soybean crop in history.

"Rice prospects improved to indicate a new record crop.

"Production of grains, including wheat, oats, barley and rye already harvested, with corn, soghum, rice and buckwheat, totals 178½ million tons—largest of record.

"Of this, the 41.2 million tons of food grains is second only to the 1947 total, and the 137.3 million tons of feed grains is much the largest ever harvested in our country.

Potato yields improved by 6 bushels during October to a record 204.5 bushels per acre, resulting in the third largest crop of record.

"Sweet potatoes, however, are a below-average crop.

"Tobacco estimates increased about 3 per cent over the October forecast as burley yield reached an all-time high.

Dry Bean Yield Sets Record

"Dry beans are unusually clean and high in quality. The yield sets a new record and production is the second largest ever harvested.

"Sugar beet yields failed to reach expectations in Western sections, but the crop is still above average.

"Sugar cane for sugar is a relatively large crop, but sirup production from sugar cane and sorgo will be below average.

"Peanuts remain a record crop, despite a slight drop from October 1 prospects.

"Milk and egg production in October reflected the favorable weather and ample feeding. Farm flocks laid 3 per cent more eggs than in October, 1947, and a third more than average.

"Total milk production in October was the smallest for the month since 1943, though production per cow continued at a record high level. This could not offset the smaller number of milk cows on farms.

Apple Crop Below Average

"Supplies of hay and roughage on farms are adequate in all except a few areas. These include parts of Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Louisiana and Texas.

"Commercial apples are estimated 20 per cent less than last year and 22 per cent less than average.

"The other important deciduous fruits are all below last year except cherries and apricots. However, all are above average except apples, pears, plums and prunes.

"Citrus production is indicated about the same as the large total last season. Oranges and lemons are each expected to be larger crops than last season, but grapefruit has prospects of a smaller total.

"Tree nuts (pecans, walnuts, almonds and filberts) are estimated at 17 per cent above last year and 31 per cent above average.

Fight Over Price Supports Expected Early in Session

An early Congressional fight over farm price supports, with Democratic farm leaders in both houses favoring the present 90-per cent level and the two largest farm organizations opposing them, appeared likely yesterday.

Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) slated to be chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, yesterday stated his opposition to the present bill which will reduce price supports on January 1, 1950, to a sliding scale ranging from 60 to 90 per cent of parity, dependent upon production surpluses.

Cotton, Tobacco Life-Saver

The present bill, Cooley said, "was rammed down the throats of the Democrats in the closing hours of the last Congress. It was a desperate effort of the Republicans to get some sort of a farm bill passed before the convention."

Cooley declared he would fight for retaining the present 90 per cent of parity. Cotton and tobacco producers in his home town of Nashville would be in "serious financial difficulties right now" if it wasn't for the present support level he asserted.

Joining with Cooley was Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) slated to resume his old place as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. "I'm going to see to it that the farmer gets 90 per cent of parity and no less on basic commodities," he told The Wall Street Journal at Fargo, N. D.

On the other hand Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, the second largest farm organization, told his national convention at Portland, Me., yesterday that his organization favors the present law.

Grange Favors Aiken-Hope Bill

The Grange platform, he said, favors "a flexible price support similar to that provided in the Aiken-Hope bill which becomes effective in 1950—creating a flexible price floor designed to prevent unjustifiable sharp fluctuations in price."

Goss warned that economic conditions similar to those which caused farm collapse and subsequent depression following World War I now face American agriculture.

"Unless adequate provision is made to prevent a recurrence of the price break, we can expect a repetition of the debacle of a generation ago," he said.

"With the major exception that farmers have kept their debts down and are in better financial condition to weather a storm, almost every factor which led to the farm crash and eventually to the greatest depression in history is present today."

Farm Bureau, Union Differ

In a statement from Washington headquarters, the American Farm Bureau Federation also indicated support of the present bill.

"One newspaper predicts that an attempt will be made in the next session to scrap the 60-to-90 present flexible support provisions of the recently-passed Aiken Bill, in favor of mandatory 90 per cent supports," says a release from the largest farm organization.

"However, most writers regard it as extremely unlikely that such an attempt could succeed. They emphasize that President Truman and the Democratic Party are pledged to the permanent support program backed by the AFBF. Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan has consistenly favored this program. So has his predecessor, Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, who will return to the Senate in January."

Savoring the change to 90 per cent parity will be the National Farmers Union.

Court Again Orders ITU To Revise Its Bargaining

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—A contempt order directing the AFL International Typographical Union to revise its bargaining procedures to comply with the Taft-Hartley Law was reinstated by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today.

Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert in Indiana held the printers' union guilty October 18 of contempt of court for alleged Taft-Hartley Law violations in contract negotiations with publishers.

The Circuit Court of Appeals stayed this order the same day.

Besides vacating its stay order, the Circuit Court today denied the Government's motion to dismiss the ITU's appeal from the contempt conviction. It indicated the Government could renew the motion without prejudice when the appeal is heard on its merits. No date was set for oral arguments on the appeal.

National Labor Relations Board attorneys who had sought dismissal of the stay order argued that without Judge Swygert's contempt order in effect, employers would be compelled to acquiesce in union demands for a closed shop and be compelled to "suffer the consequences of strikes, slowdowns, and other disruptions to their business operations because of their refusal to enter into discriminatory contracts."

FBI Investigates Voting Fraud In Kentucky

By The Associated Press

A complaint of ballot box stuffing in Kentucky in last Tuesday's general election has been placed in the hands of FBI agents.

Justice Department officials disclosed this yesterday but declined to discuss progress of the case. The fact that the FBI was put on it indicates the complaint was regarded as warranting an inquiry into whether any Federal laws were violated.

The complaint was forwarded to Attorney General Clark last week by Bourbon County, Ky., officials who said that 17 Democratic ballots were found in a ballot box in a Clintonville precinct at the time the polls opened for voting. A deputy sheriff opened the box and impounded the ballots on the challenge of a Republican watcher at the polling place.

Capital Printers, Publishers Agree To Continue Talks

Representatives of Washington newspaper publishers and their AFL printers yesterday agreed to continue contract negotiations beyond the expiration of the present agreement at midnight tonight.

A spokesman for the Washington Publishers Association said the newspapers promised to make any settlement retroactive to November 11 if the period is not in excess of 30 days.

James J. O'Connor, president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, covering some 650 local newspaper printers, said another negotiation session has been set for 2 p. m. Tuesday at 1317 F st. nw.

Basing Point Price Rule Held Unduly Alarming to Business

By The Associated Press

Two Government attorneys said yesterday that industry is unduly alarmed over the effects of the Supreme Court decision on basing point price setting in the so-called cement case.

However, a Federal Trade Commission official called the situation confused and said Congress is justified in considering new legislation.

Many industrial leaders have contended that recent actions by the court and the trade commission in effect outlaw the basing point system, by which a company quotes identical prices for its products to all buyers, regardless of the freight haul involved.

Herbert A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust cases, told a Senate Commerce Subcommittee the predicament of industry had been "greatly overstated."

The subcommittee is holding open hearings on the effect of the Supreme Court decision on various businesses.

Lynn C. Paulson, assistant trial counsel for the trade commission, said businessmen "are more frightened than they need to be."

But Allen C. Phelps, chief of the commission's division of export trade, said many administrative and judicial changes have been made in the anti-trust laws which "are inconsistent with either the implied intent of Congress or with its expressed intent."

"Certainly no one could characterize the present confused situation as desirable from a legal or administrative standpoint or one which would not justify study and serious consideration of remedial measures," Phelps said.

Bergson and Paulson contended the courts have not yet passed on the legality of the basing point system by itself. Bergson said he does not believe the practice of absorbing freight costs is illegal unless there is also a conspiracy or an attempt to destroy or injure competition.

"I don't believe the Supreme Court has yet passed on the legality of freight absorption," Paulson said. "The cement case is just another case in which the Supreme Court saw combination and conspiracy to suppress competition and fix prices."

Hoover Denies He Criticized Dewey Campaign

By The Associated Press

Former President Herbert Hoover yesterday disputed a broadcast quoting him as saying a week before the election that he believed the voters resented the type of campaign waged by Governor Dewey and would let him know about it at the polls to "his everlasting regret."

"Mr. Hoover never said anything of the kind," said Miss Bernice Miller, secretary to the former President, after referring the matter to him.

Martin Agronsky, ABC news commentator, said in a broadcast this morning that Mr. Hoover made the remarks at a dinner party in New York City. The former President, Miss Miller said, also denied having uttered another quotation attributed to him by Agronsky—that he believed the voters felt Dewey had talked down to the people, instead of directly to them, and was evading issues.

Today we remember . . .

It was a golden day in our lives—a day of exaltation, of blessed relief that war was finished and there could never be another.

That we were wrong—betrayed by life and men—does not cloud the memory of that glorious day.

We have seen another war. There are dark clouds even now in the sky of peace. But come what may, the thrill of Armistice Day will never pass away. For in the supreme happiness of that eventful hour, all Americans of every kind, color and creed, merged themselves into one great national unit. The youngest country came of age.

What has happened since—the grim tragedy of another world war—the griefs that inevitably follow in its train—the dubious prospects ahead . . . all are insignificant to a wholly united America.

Today we pause—to remember! Much as we have given to the cause of Freedom in the world, it is as nothing compared to the finding of ourselves and accepting our destiny not limited by our shore lines.

On this memorable day, we re-dedicate ourselves to Freedom in memory of those who died that we—that all men eventually might live in liberty.

Md. Alcoholic Clinic Is Proposed Again

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Maryland Legislative Council agreed today to try again at setting up a Maryland commission on alcoholism.

It gave approval to legislation to spend $100,000 a year on clinics to study alcoholism as a disease and see what can be done about it.

The clinics would be set up at Johns Hopkins and University hospitals in Baltimore, with additional clinics on the Eastern Shore and in western Maryland.

A bill in the 1947 Legislature, giving permission to set up the commission, passed the Senate but failed in the House.

Favors 2-a-Year Car Inspections

During a day devoted largely to routine committee meetings, the council approved a plan to set up motor vehicle inspection stations in every county and make twice-a-year inspection of cars mandatory on owners.

It directed preparation of legislation to give fraternal organizations freedom from taxation.

A bill to raise the base salary of Maryland circuit judges from $9500 to $12,500 a year also won council approval.

With less than two months remaining before the 1949 legislative sessions begins, the council began arranging for more frequent meetings. It will meet again next Wednesday, primarily to hear a report on prison labor legislation and to listen to a commission of watermen outline what they think the oyster laws should be.

Motorists Would Pay $1

Under the measure for mandatory automobile inspection, the State would float a bond issue of from $600,000 to $700,000 to set up the county stations. Motorists would be charged $1 a year, payable when they take out their car licenses, to finance the bond issue.

A car owner could have as many inspections in a year as he wished, but it would be necessary to have at least one every six months.

Delegate Robinson (D., Balto 4th) was instructed to draft tax legislation for fraternal organizations after representatives appeared to ask for exemption.

Former Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore and Jacob S. New appeared for the Masonic order. They told the budget and finance committee that fraternal groups for 80 years have paid no property tax, in line with "legislative intent" but now there is a case in Allegany County which threatens this policy.

Cumberland Would Tax Lodges

The City of Cumberland, after a ruling by the tax commission, assessed lodge properties in that city. An appeal is pending before the Allegany Circuit Court of Appeals.

Jackson and New asked that the fraternal organizations be blanketed into the law which exempts hospitals, asylums, charitable and benevolent organizations.

A provision in the plan for raising judges' pay would allow cities and counties who now pay more than the minimum to get refunds from the State. The State now pays $9500 but some counties and the City of Baltimore add more to that amount. If the Legislature approved the $12,500 figure, these subdivisions would be reimbursed up to $3000.

Move Begun to Lift 7% Debt Limit on Charter Government

A move gained footing yesterday to get the Maryland General Assembly to lift a 7 per cent debt limitation now on Montgomery County's charter government.

The restriction, which limits the county's indebtedness to 7 per cent of the county's assessable tax base, was written into the charter adopted November 2 to conform to State laws.

County Supervisor I. G. McNayr, whose job will expire when the new charter becomes effective, said yesterday he believed the State Legislature "should and will" raise the limit.

And Chairman Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., of the county legislative delegation, announced the delegation would, if asked, seek relief at the January General Assembly session.

"I can't conceive of any good reason why the legislature should reject our request," he added. John R. Reeves, another delegate, said an ordinary legislative act would be all that would be required to alleviate the restriction.

The County Board of Education Tuesday disclosed that it would confer with the county's legislative delegation on the advisability of legislative action. Officials then pointed out the county's 19-million-dollar bonded indebtedness already is above the 7 per cent limit based on the county's present 245-million-dollar assessable base.

Unless the limit is lifted, it was pointed out, the charter council initially will be unable to issue bonds, and school construction would be the hardest hit.

Asked if he believed the limit should be lifted, Col. Norman B. Ames, president of the charter committee, replied yesterday: "Certainly."

"The provision was inserted many years ago when a 7 per cent limit seemed adequate enough. Now, it is not," he said.

Asked if he favored outright repeal of the 7 per cent provision or raising it to a higher figure, Colonel Ames advocated the latter. "I think there should be some sort of limit. Some people have said 10 per cent would suffice," he said.

Apartment Switch to Co-op Upheld

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—A landlord may legally turn his apartment house into cooperative apartments, the Maryland Court of Appeals held in effect today.

"The mere fact that the plan may have the effect of ousting tenants in possession is not evidence of bad faith, nor can it be termed an evasion" of Federal rent control laws, the court said.

A cooperative sales plan for the Tudor Arms and Essex Arms Apartments in Baltimore was held valid. Mrs. Marie C. Cook and other owners planned to sell apartments previously rented and evict present tenants on 120-day notice to make way for buyers.

Forrestal Appeals For Chest Support

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, in an Armistice Day message, last night urged Washington area residents to get behind the current Red Feather-USO drive for $4,566,790.

Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan and Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall also joined in appealing in behalf of the Community Chest campaign.

"Today it is our opportunity to remember not only the families who are our neighbors whom we sustain in adversity through Red Feather services," declared Forrestal, "but also our obligations to our sons, and our neighbors' sons through generous support of the USO."

"Do Our Share Today"

He urged that "we do our share today and tomorrow until the job is done."

Secretary Royall pointed to the opportunity the campaign offers to "look ahead to 1949 and reactivation of many USO clubs and centers." As "citizens of the Nation's first community," he declared, "we can not do less than our best for our USO and Red Feather services."

Secretary Sullivan held that the "best personal memorial to those who die for democracy is to give, help and hope to our fellow Americans in need through our local Community Chest Federation.

In the meantime, Chauncey Parker, general campaign chairman, sent letters to each of the 500 board members in area Community Chests, urging their attendance at Friday's general report meeting, set for 12:15 p. m., at Hotel Washington. With only 61.6 per cent of the goal achieved, the current outlook is "grim," he pointed out.

Meeting Set for Friday

The Alexandria Community Chest drive, meanwhile, has reached 58.5 per cent of its $74,495 goal, it was announced yesterday at a final meeting of the campaign committee at Olde Club Tea Room. A total of $43,590.25 has been collected to date.

Although no further meetings are scheduled, reports will continue to be submitted each Wednesday directly to campaign headquarters.

Rapid Repeal of Taxes On Oleo Expected

Repeal of the long-standing Federal taxes on oleomargarine has been given high priority on the legislative program to receive early and favorable action in the next Congress, it was indicated yesterday by Democrats who will control the House Agriculture and Senate Finance Committees after January 3.

Clayton Leaves Government

William L. Clayton, a top Administration officer for the past eight years, has resigned as economic assistant to the Secretary of State, it was disclosed yesterday.

Clayton, former Undersecretary of State, plans to return to active direction of his cotton brokerage firm in Houston, Tex.

Since joining the State Department as Assistant Secretary in 1944, Clayton has been responsible for much of the United States foreign economic policy.

He helped organize UNRRA, the Marshall Plan, and directed the Administration battle in Congress last summer for renewal of the reciprocal trade program.

Clayton stepped out as Undersecretary in November, 1947, because he was concerned about his wife's health. Despite this, he accepted a later assignment as a special assistant to advise Secretary Marshall on top economic matters.

Prices Holding On Real Estate, League Is Told

By S. Oliver Goodman

There is no sign of any serious drop in property values.

This optimistic note on real estate prices was sounded yesterday at the 56th annual convention of the United States Savings & Loan League in New York.

Bodfish

Morton Bodfish, chairman of the league's executive committee, said he took this view although "it has become pretty obvious lately that both new and used houses are becoming harder to sell and buyers of new homes are getting mighty selective."

Declaring that a serious recession in property values is caused only where there is over-building, Bodfish said this situation does not exist today and "we do not seem to be near it."

A large delegation of Washington loan executives is among the estimated 2000 attending the convention.

Ralph H. Smith, league president, described the newly built home as "an inflation antidote for which credit should be employed in generous amounts.

In the first nine months this year, he reported, savings and loan associations put 807 million dollars into construction of new homes. Smith noted that "this all-time record in financing of new homes was accompanied by a decrease in the volume of credit disbursed by our institutions on existing properties. He commented: "This is the proper direction for credit to take at a time when worries about inflation are paramount."

In another report H. F. Cellarius, league secretary-treasurer, said that at the start of this year savings and loans associations and cooperative banks had $8,979,803,000 of their assets loaned to home owners for the building, buying or improvement of their homes. This was 76.6 per cent of total assets, he said, compared with 71 per cent so invested a year earlier.

In Cellarious' breakdown by States, he noted that the District of Columbia's 29 associations had 204,260 members; assets of $340,578,000 (up $44,872,000 for 1947) outstanding loans of $309,809,000 and reserves of $32,818,000.

INNOVATIONS: A new thread, welded instead of twisted, has been developed by Belding-Corticelli Co. Made by a radically new process, the "Monocord" may revolutionize industrial use and home sewing, according to the maker . . . American Viscose Corp. has developed a new continuous spinning process that cuts the time of making rayon yarn from hours to seconds. New process is called "Filamatic" and is the result of five years of research.

ODD LOTS: The consumers price index of the National Industrial Conference Board in mid-September stood at 165.5 per cent of the 1939 base, off 0.1 per cent from the August level . . . The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Baltimore has refused to interfere with the sale of South Carolina Power Co. stock to the South Carolina Electric & Gas Co. . . . Commerce Department reports that chain store and mail order sales in September reached a record high of $2,354,000,000 . . . American-owned telephone companies are preparing to get out of Europe because of the trend toward nationalization, an I. T. &T. official said yesterday . . . Potomac Edison Co. of Hagerstown, Md., has registered the proposed offering at competitive bidding of $5,500,000 in first mortgage and trust bonds.

STILL ANOTHER: Investment banking underwriters are concerned over a new trend of private placements. Latest is news that Aluminum Co. of America has arranged to borrow 55 million dollars from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and five million from Alcoa's employes retirement plan. The 3 per cent loan will mature December 1, 1973.

HOLIDAY TODAY: All major security and commodity markets, including the Washington Stock Exchange, will be closed today in observance of Armistice Day. Local banks and building and loan associations also will suspend for the day.

EARNINGS: Briggs Manufacturing Co. reported net earnings of $7,412,597 for the first nine months this year, equal to $3.80 a common share, compared with $4,743,979 or $2.44 a share in the same 1947 period. Other earnings statements:

One on the Aisle—

Excepting Betty, It's Pretty Bad

By Richard L. Coe

THERE'S NO USE denying it. I'm a hopeless old fogey when it comes to things like the Pyramids, the Paris Opera House and Betty Grable. I'm frankly mad about all of them.

Betty is to be seen on the Palace screen in something called "When My Baby Smiles at Me," which is the Twentieth Century-Fox formula of backstage life. It's an annoyingly pat picture, not a shred of originality about it and immensely foolish in its waste of talent and ideas. It's probably just as bad as you can imagine a picture with such a title would be. But Betty in Technicolor is a weaknes of mine, and I might as well admit it.

For Betty is as indestructible as the Pyramids, as lush as the Paris Opera. She is peaches and cream incarnate. Only a Thomas Hardy milkmaid drenched in Chanel No. 5 could approximate the earthily frabjous quality of Betty. In her current vehicle, she winks her knees and employs her childlike voice to such things as "By the Way," "Say Si Si," "Don't Bring Lulu," "Oui Oui Marie," "What Did I Do?" and the title song.

Although Betty's vehicle includes such fancy gadgets as the production hand of George Jessel, the weary wisdom of June Havoc and the usually likable Dan Dailey, for them I can find nothing favorable to say.

Boo to the Rest

Jessel has taken the old stage hit of George Manker Watters and Arthur Hopkins, "Burlesque," which has appeared on the screen several times before, but he's done little with it. The vitality of this play lay in its authenticity of setting which Hollywood naturally considers hopelessly uncouth. For all Jessel's proud boast that in this setting he is presenting "the people I know best," he must know that such a claim is sheer nonsense.

One little thing gives the clew to his general falsification. Who ever heard of a burlesque stage floor that glistened, that reflected dancing legs? This is a common delusion of Hollywood's pictures of backstage life; their stage floors are shined like a button—a quality you rarely find even in a new Broadway hit, let alone a Kansas City burley.

The story of Bonny, who stuck by Skid even after he lost his Broadway stardom to the bottle, has been told again and again in various switches so you'll find nothing new in one more unrealistic approach. The earthy Gussie is now burdened with a chaste vocabulary and you even have to endure the sorry spectacle of Jack Oakie imitating Al Jolson, for which he should be hung from the nearest rafter.

Dailey, usually effective in this backstage role of his, is hopelessly poor as Skid. The heart of Skid is that he's a likable guy; Dailey's Skid is dull and you couldn't care less what happened to him.

In fact, for Betty to pass up Rancher Richard Arlen (back on the screen after a bout with ear trouble) in favor of Dailey's Skid, is the only chink in that marvelous matron's virtuous elan. But, as I say, I'm just mad about Betty.

REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS and his former secretary, Miss Helen Campbell, are not likely to be found looking at themselves on the Trans-Lux screen. . . . Telenews there has an exclusive clip with Drew Pearson explaining what the Thomas indictment means and some of the canceled checks being used as evidence against the man who used to see Red in all those nameless Hollywood pictures. . . . It's quite a scoop for Telenews.

THE THREE SUNS, in town for Dr. Kavakos' fancy grill, will be putting in a howdy-do appearance this afternoon in the music department of the new Neisner store at 12th and G sts. . . . They'll be playing and autographing their records, and, considering it's a holiday, a goodly number of sunny fans are expected.

ARMISTICE DAY also means special matinees at the Warner houses, which don't usually open till later; the Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, Home, Mac-

RUNAWAY GAL: Betty Grable as the virtuous burlesque lass in "When My Baby Smiles at Me," the well-scrubbed musical version of the old stage hit, "Burlesque."

"WHEN MY BABY SMILES AT ME," 20th Century-Fox release produced by George Jessel. Screen play by Lamar Trotti, adapted by Elizabeth Reinhardt from the play "Burlesque" by George Manker Watters and Arthur Hopkins. Music and lyrics by Mack Gordon and Josef Myrow. Technicolor by Natalie Kalmus. Photographed by Harry Jackson. Musical direction by Alfred Newman. Directed by Walter Lang. At the Palace.

Powell's a Different Breed of Sleuth

G-2 Is Injected Into a Western

"STATION WEST," at Keith's, is a novel switch in whodunits. Adapted from a Luke Short story that's made the trip from the Saturday Evening Post to the Bantom Books, this finds tough guy Dick Powell in what might look to be a routine costume Western.

But Short's novel and Adapter Frank Fenton and Winston Miller have done better than that. You find Powell as an undercover military investigator looking into the murder of two soldiers at a Western outpost in the days when men stripped of their Army rank followed Horace Greely's celebrated advice.

Rock Pass is the home town of gold thieves who've made things so tough that even Wells Fargo has had to shut down. The two soldiers were killed while escorting gold and it's Dick's job to quiet the uproar. In good old Nazi style, it takes the lives of half the town for Powell to achieve his purpose, but of course he does it up right.

The usual extravagant moments are poured into the yarn, with Jane Greer as a boss lady named Charlie. Charlie, it seems, runs the town. Our Hero finds her both a mental diversion and a physical stimulus. There's a nifty fight between Powell and Guinn Williams early in the action and things don't let up much from then on.

Added to the expected is the chase theme with the assorted clues that make for good whodunit. The plot twists are numerous, sometimes even obscure, the dialogue rapid and, all told, it's a good dish of novelty.

Burl Ives' talents as a ballad singer are shoved into the background, which is a pity, but still it's the story that counts. Others of your old friends who keep busy are Agnes Moorehead, as a singer; Tom Powers, Gordon Oliver and Steve Brodie.

Even Novelist Short should be pleased with the all-round zing that RKO tossed into his popular yarn.

Truman Win Made 'Photogs' Very Happy—He's Cooperative

By Ollie Atkins

THE sad explanations of the pollsters and writers who figured the election all wrong are fading from the memory now that the crow feasts have been paid for and President Truman has called on all to unite for the good of the nation. And some 150 Washington news and newsreel and television photographers are fully relaxed again, for the most cooperative President of all time before the lenses will be the Nation's most photographed personality for another four years.

Several weeks ago this column told of the writer's personal experiences aboard the "Dewey Victory Special." The Republican candidate was pictured as a "tough" man with the press lensmen. His only saving grace was that we liked Jim Hagerty and Herby Campbell, his press secretaries. Now we intend to tell you what the photographer's life is like with Harry Truman.

The President is naturally photogenic. The only photographic problem with Mr. Truman is the thickness of his glasses, which bounce back light when viewed from certain angles. Dewey did not photograph well with a wide grin, for his teeth were too widely spaced. This problem was very bad on close-ups.

President Truman sits up on the top of the seat in the classy convertibles usually assigned for his public parades. Tom Dewey wouldn't do this in spite of pleas from the camera corps. Mr. Truman will wave his hat—a very photogenic gesture; not Dewey.

In Barstow, Calif., I fixed it up with a cowboy on horseback to ride his mount up to the rear platform of the Dewey train and hand him a cowboy hat. I told the fellow to hold the hat firmly so we could get two negatives. Do you think anyone has to prearrange such a stunt with Mr. Truman? Not on your life—you speak directly to him and I have yet to see him refuse to hold the pose for third and even fourth negatives.

Frank Cancellare, Washington syndicate photographer, was on the Truman train and constantly remarked that the President was drawing unusually heavy crowds at all his stopping points. Frank observed that maybe this was the McCoy and the President wasn't a candidate to be counted out.

Charlie Corte, another syndicate cameraman, pointed out that we are all Democrats now. I can't go so far as to say this, but must admit, speaking strictly from behind my camera, that he is wonderful in front of the lens. We like Charlie Ross and Eben Ayers. The press photographers look forward to another reign of the photographers' friend, President Harry Truman.

HENRY BEVILLE, photographic technologist at the National Gallery of Art, will give a slide-illustrated lecture Sunday afternoon entitled, "Probing Art With the Camera." Beville's talk is open to the public and will be at 4 p. m. in the lecture hall of the National Gallery. Among the interesting items Beville will describe are proving forgeries with infra-red photography, X-ray photography as he uses it and regular pictures of painted masterpieces.

Next Thursday, the Post's camera column will be devoted to making home Christmas cards in the popular photographic manner. We intend to, illustrate each column from next Thursday till Christmas with good ideas for home-made Yuletide greetings. So send us your ideas and last year's cards—we want to use as many local illustrations as possible.

Don't forget to get your best pictures printed up and submitted to the 1948 Graflex Photo Contest. Some $5000 in awards are waiting for the 61 top pictures entered by amateur and professional users of Graphic, Graflex, Crow and Century cameras before midnight, December 1. Entry forms are at all the camera shops.

If you are a color photography enthusiast put a mark on your calendar for next Wednesday. This is when the color meeting of the National Photographic Society is held at 8 p. m. in the National Museum. This Saturday the society will tour some of the rooms in the National Gallery of Art with a discussion of various painting with a view to improving photographs. For instance, in portraiture, the posing of hands, methods used to attract attention to certain points in the picture, the lighting and use of color will be pointed out. Members interested meet at the "fountain" outside the building this Saturday at 10 a. m.

Probe Is Ordered Into 'Frame' Charge

By John London
Post Reporter

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett yesterday ordered a "complete investigation" of the current Alcohol Beverage Control Board case which has resulted in a "frame-up" charge against a policeman.

Inspector George Wallrodt was ordered to probe and report on conflicting police testimony in the ABC hearing on Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., charged with 57 violations.

Wallrodt said his instructions ordered him to make "a thorough investigation of all of the angles in this case involving police officers."

20 Testify for Cafe

The most striking angle in the case was the fact that prosecution evidence was offered by two young undercover men in the headquarters vice squad while 20 policemen from the First Precinct have testified in the cafe's behalf.

Smoldering rivalry between vice squad police and vice investigators of the First Precinct was one theory advanced to explain the clashing police testimony.

Other observers believed the charges followed a routine complaint and investigation by the vice squad and that First Precinct police had testified for the cafe "just to help a brother policeman." It was noted in this connection that the proprietor of the cafe is Henry David who has a brother on the force, Mitchell David, attached to the Tenth Precinct. Mitchell David at one time owned the cafe.

"Known as Very Friendly"

Several policemen told a reporter that the grill was known to be "very friendly" to policemen, who on occasion received free food and drink. Therefore, it was not surprising that as many as 20 policemen were willing when called on by the proprietor, known as a policeman's brother, to testify for the cafe was orderly.

Another report, partly borne out by testimony at the ABC hearing, was that No. 1 detectives found the cafe a fertile source of tipsters and tips in solving crimes. If this were so, a quid-pro-quo gratitude would dictate reasons for coming to the cafe management's defense, it was said.

It has been a long-standing practice, for policemen, particularly detectives, to give "protection" to sources of information. Minor violations are winked at, if a "stool-pigeon" can be counted on for tips.

But when "outside" officers try to horn in on another officer's sources, "that's when the trouble begins," one observer commented yesterday.

Meanwhile, some light was thrown on how the cafe happened to come under scrutiny of vice squad operatives. ABC Board Chairman Alan Payne told a reporter a complaint was received from an individual whom he would not identify beyond saying "he was an official but not connected with the District government."

Payne said the complaint was referred to Police Chief Barrett who forwarded it to Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad chief, for investigation.

Known to Be at Odds

While Blick is regarded as a friend of Capt. Howard Covell, head of the First Precinct, it has been no secret that Blick's men have been at odds with some vice investigation of the First Precinct.

Blick's men reportedly have resented stories about the antivice exploits of Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, No. 1 present plainclothes investigator.

Manthos, frequently referred to as the "one-man vice squad," claims to have secured some 150 vice convictions.

Publicity-famished members of the vice squad maintain that Manthos "comes to us for advice and we give him tips and tell him how to work, then he gets all the glory."

Grill Framed, ABC Is Told

he had read some of the testimony in the newspapers.

Later, questioned as to the falsity or truth of each of Wallace's 57 charges, Manthos admitted he had "no knowledge" of 12 of the charges.

"Was it because you had no knowledge of these charges that you previously stated they were false?" Wise pursued.

"No, sir."

"Then on what did you base your statement that "Wallace's testimony was false?" Wise demanded.

"By his (Wallace) own admission," was the reply.

At another point, backing up his assertions that Wallace's charges were false Manthos declared Wallace told him of "a man putting $105 on a table" at the grill.

"You know you can't count $105," Manthos declared, apparently meaning it would be difficult for an observer some distance away.

(One of the charges against the grill was that a man was solicited by a girl as he counted a wad of money.)

Earlier Sergt. Maurice F. Prestele of the First Precinct, appearing as a character witness, testified he visited the grill "8 or 10 times" a week and had never seen any violations.

The hearing will be resumed on November 16. The delay was at the request of Defense Attorney David who cited pressure of other business.

Wise said he may call the commanding officer of the First Precinct as a witness later on.

The special squad set up by Governor Lane to solve the slaying picked Edwards up again Monday night.

He was placed in a cell at the Waterloo State Police barracks, midway between Washington and Baltimore. A former prison inmate working for the police was in the next cell and prodded Edwards into conversation. It was recorded.

Pistol Found in Home

Souers said after the officers eavesdropped on Edwards they went last night to his home at Freetown, about 3 miles southeast of Glen Burnie. They found the pistol in a cupboard behind some fruit.

An officer took it to the FBI laboratories in Washington and Souers said the scientific tests showed it was the gun which fired the bullets taken from the heads of John and Mary.

The investigators picked up Edwards' three brothers, one at his home in Baltimore and the other two in Freetown. There were conflicting stories about one of them borrowing the gun.

The officers finally decided to accuse Thomas Alexander and swore out the warrants before Magistrate David Dunker.

Not Far From Scene

His home is not far from the backroad beanpatch southeast of Glen Burnie where Mahlan's car was found September 18. The car's interior was spattered with blood. Bullets had gone through the front windows. There was a bloody footprint in clay on the back seat.

John and Mary had left her home in Glen Burie the evening before on their weekly date. John was Mary's favorite boy friend, but they were not engaged.

As many as a thousand volunteers joined in beating the woods for them. Three days later, on another backroad 6 miles west of Annapolis and 20 miles from where the car was found, a highway worker took time out for a smoke and stumbled onto their bodies.

Medical examiners said Mary had not been raped.

Dozens of persons were picked up and questioned in the long investigation. Police followed down the slimmest leads, but they all petered out—until today.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BO McMILLAN, WHO demonstrated the efficacy of prayer a generation ago when he quarterbacked Centre College's Praying Colonels to an unbeaten season, is still devout. He credits the invocations in the pregame huddles of the little Kentucky team with being a mighty factor in its 6-0 victory of 1921 over Harvard. His own 25-yard touchdown run helped of course.

POVICH

This week-end, McMillan is bringing his Detroit Lions to Griffith Stadium to play the Indians. Bo retains his high faith in prayer, but he is also a materialist, and happy about the situation this week that finds Bill Dudley ready to return to the Lions' backfield. The Lions are never as potent as when Mr. Dudley is going for them.

The most devout football player I knew was Harry Costello, the old Georgetown quarterback, who made a career of tackling Jim Thorpe in the days when the now-ancient Carlisle Indian was the scourge of the gridiron. But in the days before Costello became famous, he was just a fresh-faced kid from Connecticut trying, as a 135-pounder, to make the Georgetown varsity team.

COSTELLO RELATES the story of the morning of the big game with Virginia when he was to start at quarterback, and nervous about the whole thing. A Jesuit priest at the Hilltop noted young Harry's case of nerves and inquired as to what might be disturbing him. Costello confessed that he was jittery.

"You see, Father," he said, "a lot may be depending on me today. The team and the whole student body are betting those Virginia kids on today's game. If it gets close toward the finish, they'll be expecting me to dropkick a field goal, and I don't want to miss. Right now, I'm scared I'll let 'em down."

The priest calmed Costello with the assurance he wouldn't miss and then suggested Harry go to the chapel and fortify himself with some prayers. That's what Costello did. And in the final minutes, the game was close, and they did call on him for a dropkick, and he made it, and Georgetown won the game.

Costello saw the same priest after the game. "Father, it was wonderful," he exclaimed. "Those prayers did it."

"That's right," agreed the priest. "And, Harry, it also helps if you're a good kicker."

McMILLAN KNOWS it also helps to have the kind of a football player available that Dudley is, if you're trying to win a football game. Dudley is a strange creature. He doesn't pass well, he doesn't kick well, he's slow, and by his own admission he's too small to play pro football. But his talents when fully assembled add up to a tremendous football player.

He can be called the Lou Boudreau of football. Boudreau, too is slow, and not big, and he has small hands and doesn't stack up as powerful, but he makes all the plays and like Dudley is the best player in his league. Dudley can be likened, too, to Johnny Lujack. They can be as exciting on defense, as most stars are on offense.

Dudley has been in only three games for the Lions this season on account of a shoulder separation. McMillan remembers well when it happened, in a practice scrimmage on October 2. Dudley threw a block for a Lion ball carrier, and McMillan was moved to ejaculate "That's the most beautiful block I've ever seen." But the price of witnessing it was costly for McMillan because Dudley has been hampered ever since by the shoulder injury he suffered.

THE REDSKINS KNOW Dudley well. A few years back he beat 'em virtually single-handedly in Pittsburgh. He put the Steelers out in front with a long touchdown gallop, and a bit later after the Redskins tied the score Dudley broke away again on another lengthy jaunt. The late Jock Sutherland withdrew him from the game to rest him, but within the next minute Sammy Baugh had the Redskins down in Pittsburgh territory again and Sutherland routed the weary Dudley off the bench. He was, you see, the Steelers' best defense man, too.

Dudley's runs are things of beauty despite his lack of speed. He uses his blockers like no other back in the pro league. One oncoming tackler never bothers him and he virtually directs his own downfield blocking. He doesn't embarrass blockers who have missed assignments, either. He makes them look good with his own elusiveness and change of pace.

The Lions got him from Pittsburgh by trading their draft rights to Bob Chappuis, plus two other players. Dudley had announced he wouldn't play another game for Sutherland, whose coaching system he didn't like. What didn't he like about Sutherland's system? "He made you play when you were tired," said Bill.

Pick-The-Winners Lineup This Week

MARYLAND VS. NORTH CAROLINA at Griffith Stadium Saturday. That's a hard one on which to select the probable score in this week's Pick-The-Winners contest sponsored by The Washington Post.

This contest is designed to reward those who know their teams well, and study the accounts of games week by week.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post.

The contest each week will include 20 of the major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games.

A twenty-first (21st) game is listed on which the "Probable Score" will be given by each contestant.

TERP GAME DOESN'T WORRY CAROLINA'S CHARLIE JUSTICE (22) AND HOSEA RODGERS

Terps Will Go All Out Against N. C. Defense

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

By cracking into it, around it and, they hope, over it, Maryland's Terrapins intend to find out Saturday if the North Carolina defense is as good as it's cracked up to be.

The Terps are determined to make this an offensive battle. They've armed themselves with a bag full of Sunday punches and they're going to throw them. They won't be content to wage a defensive tug of war.

They showed that yesterday in a rock 'em, sock 'em scrimmage against a freshmen team employing Tar Heel defenses. And the Terps did better than all right against the frosh impersonators.

Naturally, the defensive frosh team wasn't quite as good as the Carolina defenders, the Nation's second best, but the College Park first year men are big and rugged.

They had their moments of defensive glory, too, but they came nowhere near stopping the razzle-dazzle, dipsy-doodle maneuverings of the boys who'll strut at Griffith Stadium Saturday.

Even the Maryland coaches seemed pleased.

"If they play like that Saturday, we won't get licked too bad," said Jim Tatum.

Tatum feels rather certain that Maryland can score twice against his alma mater. And so does Carl Snavely, football boss of the unbeaten Tar Heels. Snavely said so from Chapel Hill last night and added, "if they do, we'll have to

Duke Must Watch Davis' 13 Targets

When Andy Davis of George Washington fades to pass Saturday at Durham, N. C., Blue Devil defenders will have to keep an eye on 13 potential receivers.

Not one to discriminate, Andy has passed to that many different Colonials in eight games, and they have helped him pile up 52 completions for 880 yards and three touchdowns.

If you want to call any of them Andy's favorite targets, you'd have to pick Ends Frank Close, who has caught 10, and Hank Bartelloni and Charlie Butler, who have caught eight each.

A blocking back last year, Butler has gone the farthest with Davis' passes, 140 yards.

The fellow with the best average is Bill Szanyi, pronounced "zany," and considered by many as the best all-around end on the squad. The Ogdensburg, N. J., lad has nabbed only one pass, but that was for 61 yards and a touchdown against Virginia.

Not afraid to pass from deep in his own territory, Andy has chucked four times from his own end zone, and completed all four. One, caught by End Charley Jones in the Lafayette game, went for a 54-yard gain.

Jones has caught six Davis passes for 111 yards, all in that LaFayette game.—HERB HEFT.

Bonk Bruised In Terp Workout

Fullback Harry Bonk came up with a stiff back muscle durnig Maryland's scrmmage yesterday.

The 210-blocker and ball carrier was hustled off to the training room where heat was applied to his back. Trainer Duke Wyre reported Bonk was much better after the treatment and should be ready to go at full speed against Notrth Carolina Saturday.

.304 Hitter Is Nats' Only Draft Choice

Special to The Post

Cincinnati, Nov. 10.—Out of the minor league grab-bag that produced 19 players for major league clubs, the Washington team today drafted a lone prospect, Outfielder John Simmons, who hit .304 for Montreal.

For its $10,000 expenditure, the Washington club obtained in Simmons a husky right-handed hitter who has been in organized ball since 1943. He batted .323 for Baltimore in 1947 after his discharge from the armed services and at Montreal last season he amassed the estimable total of 84 runs driven in. He is 24, and 6 feet 2 inches.

Simmons was one of the numerous properties of the Brooklyn Dodgers who were left subject to the draft because Brooklyn's 40-man reserve list was already crowded to capacity.

The intended first draft choice of the Nats was Dwain Sloat, veteran left-handed knuckle ball pitcher of St. Paul, but the Chicago Cubs, with first pick because of their eighth-place finish, claimed Sloat.

The major leagues paid a total of $182,500 for their 15 draft claims, with the White Sox making the highest expenditure. At an outlay of $30,000 they claimed Pitcher Mathew Surkont from Rochester, Infielder Gene Markland from Milwaukee and Catcher Don Wheeler from Minneapolis.

Five teams, the Yankees and Red Sox of the American League, and the Giants, Pirates and Dodgers of the National, failed to put in a bid for any player. A total of 5400 players from 58 minor leagues, were eligible for draft.

The complete list of players drafted:

National League

Chicago—Dwain Sloat, pitcher, from St. Paul, and James Kirby, outfielder from Shreveport, La.

Cincinnati—Homer E. Howell, catcher, of San Francisco, and John S. Pramesa, Jersey City catcher.

St. Louis—Edward Sauer, Los Angeles outfielder.

Boston—Don Thompson of Columbus, and Charles Gilbert of Nashville, both outfielders.

American League

Chicago—Mathew Surkont, pitcher, from Rochester; Gene Markland, Milwaukee infielder, and Don Wheeler, Minneapolis catcher.

Washington—John Simmons, Montreal outfielder.

St. Louis—Robert Malley, Indianapolis pitcher, and Irving Medlinger, Birmingham pitcher.

Detroit—Marvin Grissom, Sacramento pitcher.

Philadelphia—Tom Davis of Hollywood, and J. A. Wilson of Baltimore, both shortstops.

Cleveland—Herman Reich, Portland, Oreg., outfielder.

2115 See Rochester Trail Most Of Game

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Washington's Caps continued to be invincible in Basketball Association of America circles, turning back the Rochester Royals, 73-66, with no apparent effort last night at Uline Arena.

Washingtonians remained blase toward early season basketball and a slim gathering of 2115 was on hand to watch Red Auerbach's boys chalk up their fourth successive victory to take a firm grasp on the top spot in the Eastern Division.

Caps Never Pressed

The game wasn't nearly as close and certainly not as exciting as the final score would indicate. Rochester, after staying in the running for the first 12 minutes, trailed most of the rest of the way by 10 points or more. Guard Lionel Malamed made their total more respectable by garnering three baskets late in the last two minutes.

Rochester, runnerup in the National League last season, was dropped by the Caps as easily as they downed George Mikan and his Minneapolis Lakers, N. L. champs. Observers insist the unbeaten Caps have yet to be pressed.

Chunky Freddie Scolari led the victors in the scoring column with 12 points but this, too, was a team affair. He was trailed by irrepressible Bones McKinney, 11; Kleggie Hermsen, 11; Bob Feerick, 10, and Johnny Norlander, 9.

Individual scoring honors were taken by 6-foot 9-inch Arnie Risen, former Ohio State star who was Rochester's best player, proving it with 17 points.

Feerick's Streak Ends

Runnerup for Rochester was Arne Johnson who made nine of his 15 points in that first period when the Royals trailed, 19-17. Bob Davies, Seton Hall All-America, gathered nine points on three field goals and three fouls.

Worst thing that happened to the Caps was that Bob Feerick missed his first foul try of the year. The handsome Californian scored 21 consecutive free throws before he went bad early in the third period.

Feerick came right back with a field goal and started a new streak with a toss from the 15-foot mark that increased the Cap lead to 48-39.

Washington moves over to Baltimore tonight to face the defending BAA champs and returns here Saturday night to entertain Fort Wayne.

Hershey, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Hershey Bears unleashed a neat passing attack and a stonewall defense to whitewash the Washington Lions, 4 to 0, tonight before 3990 fans.

The Bears broke through the Lions' defenst with Arnold Kullman scoring the first goal in 14:09 of the opening period.

In the second period the Bears clicked twice. The first goal went to Zellio Topparzini in 7:13 and Kullman chalked up his second tally in 14:49. Both shots were fired at close range.

The third period saw Frankie Mario score for the Bears in 3:48.

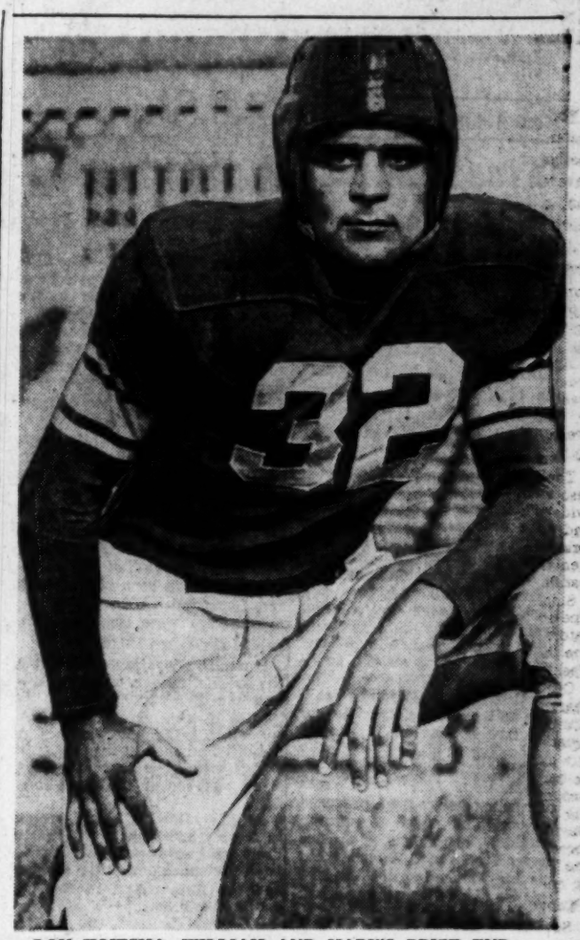
Harris' Chances Dim, Spike Briggs Says in D. C. Visit

Vice President Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, jr., of the Detroit Tigers, declared in a visit to Washington yesterday that Bucky Harris is not being considered at this time as a prospective manager of the Tigers.

Briggs, in Washington to attend a funeral, said he did not communicate with Harris here.

He told Radio Broadcaster Arch McDonald, "Harris did a good job with the Yankees and got a bad deal. If we had had opportunity to talk with Harris before the Yankees released him, we would have liked it. But we are not considering him now. Everybody is subject to a change of mind, though."



LOU HOITSMA, WILLIAM AND MARY'S PRIZE END

Modest Lou Hoitsma Lineman of Week

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Lou Hoitsma raised up from his end position and just sort of grinned. Mist seemed to filter from his eyes and the 6-foot, 2-inch William and Mary flankman who once played center was every inch a pleased football player.

Hoitsma had just been told he'd been selected today as the lineman of the week in the Associated Press poll. That honor was his for a brilliant performance in William and Mary's surprising 7-7 tie last Saturday with North Carolina.

Asked about his circus catch of a 21-yard touchdown pass from Tailback Tommy Korczowski, Hoitsma said he "didn't know what was going on from the time the play started until they were putting the score on the scoreboard.

"They told me in the huddle to get down into the end zone," Hoitsma said, "and get that ball. And I just had to get that ball...

"Say, I wish you'd say something about Tommy Thompson, our center. That Tommy's an All-America center in my opinion in every game we play. He's the best there is. Wasn't he terrific?"

William and Mary Coach R. N. (Rube) McCray described the Paterson, N. J., senior as a "quiet, well-mannered sort of fellow everybody likes." When Hoitsma returned from military service in 1946, McCray decided he'd make a good end.

Hoitsma makes the dean's honor roll as a mathematics major. He's been drafted for professional football by the Washington Redskins and by Cleveland of the All-America Conference.

This week's nominations:

Centers—Thompson, William and Mary; Harris, Texas; Watson, Rice; Bednarik, Penn; Gilbert, Florida; Ecklund, Oregon.

Ends—McNeill, Michigan; O'Quinn, Wake Forest; Hoitsma, William and Mary; Canad, Arkansas; Williams, Rice; Polsem, SMU; Hillhouse, Texas A. & M.; Austin, Duke; Wilson, South Carolina; Wimberly, LSU; Roberts, Penn; Berrang, Villanova.

Tackles—Clark, Cornell; Maxwell, Tennessee; Stanell, Arkansas; Hamberger, SMU; Roberts, Baylor; Petrovich, Texas; Brisey, Tennessee; Cain, Kentucky.

Guards—Healy, Georgia Tech; Mouser, Baylor; Stautzenberger, Texas A. & M.; Burris, Oklahoma; Kelly, Penn State.

Villanova's Set

'Conn's Status Doubtful for Tomorrow

Georgetown travels to Philadelphia to meet Villanova tomorrow night and the home team apparently has everything going for it.

Hoya Coach Jack Hagerty glumly admitted after yesterday's final practice that speedster Billy Conn wasn't running well. "If he doesn't show improvement, I doubt if he will even dress for the game," Hagerty said.

Trainer Eddie Anderson still has hopes that Conn will come around. The brilliant sophomore has been far and away Georgetown's leading offensive threat. He has a wide statistical edge over the other backs despite the fact that he missed the entire game and played only half the Fordham and Denver games.

Without Conn, it's difficult to imagine the Hoyas having an offense that will be much of a threat to Villanova, a team that ranks thirteenth nationally in total defense and ninth in pass defense.

The Wildcats already have been mentioned prominently as opposition for Wake Forest in the Dixie Bowl and, after last year's 14-12 squea past the Hoyas, they'll by guarding against the possibility of their bowl hopes being shattered.

Villanova has had more than its share of injuries in a tough campaign in which only two games have been dropped and one tied

Fan, 63, Wins Post Contest

Ex-GPO Bookbinder Picks All 20 Right

There's no age limit on being a football expert. Finalist in last week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winners contest proves that.

Clinton R. Tucker, sr., 63-year-old retired Government Printing Office bookbinder, correctly called 20 winners of 20 games and for the first time this season the judges didn't have to employ the tie-breaking twenty-first game to determine the victor.

At 63, Mr. Tucker becomes the oldest winner in the two-year history of The Washington Post's popular pigskin prediction contest. Youngest was last year's double winner, 14-year-old Trygve Tuve of Chevy Chase.

Among the 12 runnersup last week was another double winner of last year, William Kaiser, 6003 Third st. ne. All 12 missed only one of the 20 primary targets. Kaiser, 31-year-old War Department transportation specialist who seems to specialize in football predictions too, missed Virginia's upset of North Carolina State.

Tucker, 1214 Seminary rd., Silver Spring, called the turn on that one and blithely picked Tennessee over Georgia Tech, Wake Forest over Duke and Oklahoma over Missouri in the other principal reversals.

The alert Mr. Tucker explained, "I'm just the stubborn kind, I guess. When I like a team's chances, I pick it. I don't care what the real 'experts' think."

CLINTON R. TUCKER, SR.

Tucker has been ailing for more than a week with a heavy cold, but he jumped out of bed when he was informed that his entry was first and entitled him to the top prize of an all-expense trip for two to the Army-Navy service classic at Philadelphia, November 27.

He also will receive four tickets to the Georgetown-George Washington game at Griffith Stadium, November 20.

"First thing I ever won in my life," Tucker said happily.

In addition to Kaiser, the other runners-up included:

Anna Mae Carthy, 3420 Legation st. nw.; Edward Muljns, 5315 28th st.; Frank W. Kelley, 1800 Eads st., Arlington; Matthew Sinch, 1810 Connecticut ave. nw.; Harry E. Brady, 415 Talbot ave., Laurel, Md.; R. S. Mason, 2100 19th st. nw.; A. C. Scatras, 5335 Connecticut ave. nw.; Leroy L. Brown, 1024 Third st. sw.; Charles E. Hoy, 5350 26th st. n., Arlington; Hyman Cohen, 4839 Kansas ave. nw.; L. A. Goldman, 4107 18th st. ne.

Adaptable Trots to 15-Length Win in Pimlico Steeplechase

But Deceives Foes

'Tree' Adams No Longer Fools 'Skins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

DON'T BE ALARMED about that big fellow who, by all signs, is dying a slow and horribly painful death at Sunday's meeting of the Washington Redskins and Detroit Lions at Griffith Stadium,

He isn't actually.

It's only John (Tree) Adams, the 'Skins' biggest and best tackle, going about his business in his own inimitable manner.

Some say Adams is lazy, and slow. Others take one look and decide Big John likes to feign injuries, probably to avoid the heavy going. It's strictly an illusion — any team in the National Football League would give up its season ticket sales for five tackles like him.

The Tree and Redskin Coach Turk Edwards now have an understanding. After three years of rushing on the field, prepared for anything short of extreme unction, every time Adams seemed to be hurt, Edwards told his big lineman something like this as the '48 season started:

"THE TEAM PHYSICIAN is tired. The coaching staff is tired. We'll come out for you, from now on, only after you cease to breathe 10 minutes."

With this understanding, Adams was left apparently helpless after one play last week in Boston. Everybody walked away and ignored him. He gradually got his 6-foot 7-inch frame upright, dragged himself back into position like a man on his last legs.

A few plays later, he hit Roy Zimmerman so hard that the Yank quarterback had to be carried off the field.

"That should teach him a lesson for making nasty remarks about the Redskin line," he commented later.

Adams' size earned him the only double bed ordered by the Redskins at out-of-town hotels. But he's a sylph-like 237-pounder this year, 20 pounds lighter than last year.

He came to the 'Skins in 1945, their second draft choice after backfield star Jim Hardy, later traded to the Los Angeles Rams for Jack Jacobs. A native of Arkansas, he played three years of good football at Notre Dame. He was named on Harry Wisner's All-America of 1944.

PRO FOOTBALL has been kind to Adams. He's the highest paid of Washington's linemen. On the strength of his brilliant play, he holds the lucrative offseason job as both radio sports announcer and auto salesman. He's married and has a year-old daughter.

But The Tree is frustrated where his hobby is concerned. He wants to build boats, real full-sized boats, not models. The dormitories at Notre Dame and his apartment at the Cavalier just weren't made to house the hobby he started back in Arkansas.

With his boat building restricted, big John's pet pastime these days, on and off the field, is teasing the smallest man on the Redskin squad, Halfback Bob Nussbaumer.

It's an hilarious duel in which The Tree shows twice as much energy as he does between plays of a football game. And about half the energy he uses during the plays.

12,500 See $22 Shot Pull Upset

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 10.—The $15,000-added Manly Steeplechase, won by many long shots in the past, went t oa $22 shot today. Miss Ella A. Widener's Adaptable, a dull performer since early in the season, found his running and jumping legs to be the easiest kind of a winner over the marathon distance of 3 miles and 22 fences.

Held far in back of the pace, Adaptable went to the front leaving the twenty-first jump and won by 15 lengths from Rokeby Stable's American Way, who was made the 4-to-5 choice when coupled in the betting with Genancoke, the pacesetter. Several of the horses who finished in back of Adaptable and American Way looked as though they were ready to drop.

Point Bleu Takes Third

It was D. Djordjadz's Point Bleu, the French invader, who staggered into the third money about 20 lengths in back of American Way and eight lengths to the good of Auburn Farm's Floating Isle, who closed with more speed than any other member of the eight-horse field.

As Adaptable had closed ground in steeplechase run at 2 miles he drew some support from fans who tried to "knock down" the favorite and the final payoff in the win cashiers was $22.

Although the track was marked "fast" by the chartmakers, it was not at its best and the turf was damp when Adaptable turned the 3 miles over 22 jumps in 6:00 4-5 held by Paper Moon.

12,500 See Program

The members of the nearby hunt set were out in full force for the final stake of the infield season and approximately 12,500 fans watched the eleventh program of the Maryland Jockey Club's 13-day meeting, which will close on Friday with a running of the Pimlico Cup.

While Adaptable won the climaxing event of the jumping year, he hardly will be named the "steeplechase horse of the year," for his previous races were not nearly as good as those of American Way, the leading money winning hedgehopper of the year. The $3,000 second money in yesterday's test increased American Way's earnings for the year to $56,425.

Away from the winner's circle since early last summer, Adaptable earned $13,075 today to bring his total to $39,775. It was his third victory of the season.

With P. A. Rothfuss' Top Foot, winner of the first race paying $19.60 and Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Bay Orders, which paid $19.20 completed a $212.20 daily double.

'BUGS' THOMPSON, MOST PROMISING CLEMSON FRESHMAN

'Bugs' Thompson Is Ticketed To Replace Gage at Clemson

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Clemson College's football team, deep in the heart of Dixie, looks to Washington, D. C., for help next year, and from all indications, will get it.

Eight District boys are on the Tigers' freshman team, and Frosh Coach Banks McFadden says that at least three will be varsity regulars next year.

They are Halfback Robert (Bugs) Thompson and his two favorite pass targets on last year's interhigh championship McKinley Tech eleven, Ends Jim McCauley and Glenn Smith.

Seldom has the play of a freshman team back captured the fancy of a State the way Thompson's has South Carolina.

When the George Washington U. team journeyed to Charleston, S. C., to meet The Citadel last Saturday, Citadel Line Coach Bob Suffridge was still talking about Bugs. "The best young back I've seen this year," said the former Tennessee All-America.

The night before, the fleet 170-pound Thompson had reeled off touchdown runs of 65 and 40 yards as the Clemson frosh downed Citadel's yearlings, 21-6. A 65-yard pass play, Thompson to McCauley, accounted for Clemson's only touchdown in its only loss to South Carolina. These are examples of what he's been doing all season.

McFadden, Clemson's All-America back in 1939, says, "Our varsity loses its best back, Bobby Gage, by graduation this year, but his loss will be eased considerably by Thompson. He'll be as good or better than Gage before he graduates."

McCauley and Smith each have caught three touchdown passes in Clemson's five games, and are staying in on defense as well as offense.

One of the boys who played against Thompson, McCauley and Smith in last year's interhigh title game, sponsored by The Washington Post, is also an important Clemson freshman figure. He is Bob Douglas, 220-pound tackle from Central High.

The other D. C. freshmen players are Halfbacks Ray McKay and Jack Doffort and Tackle Bob Hanrahan from Devitt Prep and Fullback Vince Pugliese from Roosevelt High.

Thompson and Doffort got a head start on the other boys. They ran on the varsity track team last year. Bugs finished third in the State collegiate 440 race, while Jack was Clemson's No. 1 220 hurdler.

Hillcrest, Langdon Win Court Crowns

Ronnie Smith scored 13 points as Hillcrest defeated Buchanon, 23-13, yesterday for the D. C. Recreation Department junior girls outdoor basketball championship.

The senior girls' title went to Langdon, which downed Takoma, 18-9. Betty King was high scorer for the winners with eight points. Both games were played at the New York Avenue Playground.

All Unbeaten Major Teams Should Romp

By Steve Snider

New York, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The list of major unbeaten, untied football teams, slashed nearly in half a week ago, stood at five today and all five still should be in there come Saturday night.

Army, California, Michigan and Notre Dame figured to hold their places within the charmed circle with their hard-hitting offiensives. Clemson, fifth on the unbeaten list, should be pressed far harder than the others against Wake Forest but we give it a slight edge.

The Unbeaten

Notre Dame over Northwestern—tarnishing a potential Rose Bowler.

California over Washington State—by 20. Too much power.

EAST

Penn State over Temple—Easy.

Also: Brown over Harvard, Holy Cross over Fordham, Rutgers over New York U., Colgate over Syracuse, Princeton over Yale, North Carolina State over Duquesne, Boston College over William and Mary, Villanova over Georgetown.

Midwest

Minnesota over Iowa—Too much heft; by 14.

Illinois over Ohio State—Close and a hunch.

Oklahoma over Nebraska—The Sooners obviously are rugged.

Also: Pittsburgh over Purdue, Wisconsin over Marquette, Kansas over Kansas State, Missouri over Colorado, Detroit over St. Louis, Michigan State over Iowa State, Cincinnati over Western Reserve.

SOUTH

Georgia over Auburn—Figures mighty easy.

Tennessee over Mississippi—that Tennessee line sounds great.

Also: Kentucky over Florida, Mississippi State over Louisiana State, Vanderbilt over Marshall, Tulane over Baylor, West Virginia over Virginia, North Carolina over Maryland, Duke over George Washington, Miami over Chattanooga, V. M. I. over Citadel, Washington and Lee over Davidson, Richmond over Virginia Tech.

SOUTHWEST

Southern Methodist over Arkansas—Walker over Clyde Scott.

Texas over Texas Christian—A shade the better attack.

FAR WEST

Stanford over Montana—Back in class after that Army Debacle.

Also: Oregon State over Utah, Santa Clara over St. Mary's, Idaho over Portland, Nevada over Fresno State.

Raiders Tie For 4th by Beating Colts

By Billy Gilbert

Western's Ed Dunlap intercepted Arnie Tranen's flat pass with less than five minutes left to play and ran 49 yards for the winning touchdown as the Red Raiders scored a 14-7 win over Coolidge yesterday at the Western Stadium.

The victory gave Western a 3-3 record and boosted it into a tie for fourth place with McKinley Tech. Both teams are out of contention for the title.

Coolidge opened the scoring in the first period. With the ball on the Western 30, Dale Summerbell's intended lateral to Dunlap went astray and Chuck Davis fell on the ball on the Red Raider 19 for the Colts.

Three plays later Benny Duvall streaked around end for 8 yards to score. Jack Brosnan ran over the conversion on a quarterback sneak.

Western knotted the count in the second period on a march from its 34. The score was set up when interference was called on Duvall on the oColidge 4 as Buddy Jones tried to catch a pass from Summerbell. Jim O'Leary bucked over for the touchdown from 4 yards out.

Sam Evans booted both extra points for Western.

Chamberlain Bows, 13-0

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10—Unbeaten St. Mary's Iligh chalked up its fifth straight victory with a 13-0 win over Chamberlain Vocational of Washington, D. C., here today.

Bill Kleberg was the game's star as he ran for one touchdown and passed to Bob Fitch for the other. A Harry Wiggins to Joe DiMaggio pass after the first touchdown in the second quarter gave St. Mary's its extra points. The loss was Chamberlain's third in six games.

Anacostia Can Clinch Second Place Today

There's no Armistice Day vacation for Anacostia's Indians who battle Eastern's Ramblers at 2 p. m. at Central Stadium in an important Interhigh League football game.

If favored Anacostia wins, its prize is a lock on second place and a possible crack at unbeaten Central for the championship. A second-place finish for Anacostia would equal its best previous performance in 1941 when the Indians were btaten for the title by Central.

The "runningest" team in the league, Anacostia will depend on Backs Ed Burt, Bill Butler and Bob Mitchell to carry it to victory. Eastern will bank on Ritchie Hits, its breakaway threat, and passer Danny Cookman to spring an upset.

score three times to win." Which is logical enough.

While the Terps are counting on Vic Turyn, Hubie Werner, Jimmy LaRue and Harry Bonk to lead the offensive parade, they aren't exactly neglecting their defense.

They worked on that phase long and hard yesterday. The guards and tackles were cautioned by Line Coach George Barclay, another former Snavely product, to beware of Carolina's trap plays, the teasing maneuvers which Carolina employs to spring Charlie Justice and Wingback Johnny Clements into the clear.

"You must stop Justice at the line of scrimmage," Barclay warned his beefy linemen. "If you don't you won't stop him because he's too fast and too shifty once he gets by."

If the Terps do halt Justice on the ground, which is no simple task, they'll then have to halt his passing. And nobody in three years of college football has completely bottled up the Asheville Choo-Choo.

But word from Philly is that Jordan Olivar's squad will be in better physical shape than it has been in weeks.

Good backs who have recovered from injuries include Fullback Ralph Pasquariello, 225-pound battering ram; Halfback Jack Moran, Halfback Bob Polidor and Fullback Tom Clavin.

Even a couple of linemen are getting back in action against the Hoyas, Guards Joe Scarcelli and George Pavalko. The latter is expected to play despite a broken hand.—JACK WALSH.

French Embassy Plays Howard Booters Today

Howard University will meet the French Embassy team in a soccer match on the Howard University field today at 2:30 p. m.

Howard defeated Lincoln U., 1-0, in soccer, but lost to the same school in cross-country, 29-26.

Midget Auto Races Add Holiday Attraction for Tonight

A strong Armistic Day flavor will be added to tonight's seven-event midget auto racing program at Uline Arena, starting at 8:30.

Here's how the military will contribute:

The D. C. National Guard under command of Col. Leroy S. Mann will furnish color bearers, music, and demonstrations of several types of guns.

Fort Meade soldiers will provide huge spotlights to guide fans to the Arena, and its 28 piece Army Band will provide music.

The 36-man 163d Military Police battalion team, in close order drill, will put on a show under Lieut. Col. George A. Weber. The 36-man platoon from the 171st Military Police battalion will duplicate the drill in swing time under direction of Lieut. Col. Sylvester F. Blackwell.

Maryland Telephone Rate Boost Asked

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore yesterday asked for a rate increase that would affect more than 500,000 subscribers, including those in counties adjacent to Washington.

In a petition, the Maryland utility told the Public Service Commission that a rate boost is necessary because of higher operating expenses and declining earnings. The company placed partial blame on "recent wage increases to employes."

Officials of Washington and Virginia telephone companies declined to comment on the rate situation. Most Maryland telephone workers won wage increases this fall; the bulk of Washington and Virginia employes did not. One Washington union, covering some 3500 workers, is considering acceptance of a company wage offer.

The proposed new Maryland rate increase would bring the company about $3,600,000 additional yearly, according to W. G. Morrel, vice president and general manager. The boost is required to "place the company on a financially sound basis and to permit it to furnish adequate telephone service," he asserted.

Officials said there was no way to determine how the rate raise would be distributed. A new schedule would be put into effect when and if the PSC authorizes a raise.

An increase of more than five million in annual revenues was granted the telephone company in 1947, increasing the monthly charge for various services in some parts of the State by 75 cents to $2.25.

The Baltimore company serves all of Maryland except a small section in the northwest corner of the State.

Ballots Sent Out on Phone Wage Offer

Ballots were in the mail yesterday to some 3500 Washington area telephone plant, accounting and commercial workers so they can express their views on a tentatively accepted company wage boost offer.

Glenn Watts, president of Division 36, Communications Workers of America (Ind.) said results of the referendum would be made public Friday.

Some 1500 union members, at a meeting Tuesday night in Turner's Arena, discussed the previously rejected proposal, which provides an average weekly wage increase of $4.11 or about 10 cents an hour. The offer was tentatively accepted by union officials last Friday, subject to ratification by the membership.

At Tuesday's rally, according to Watts, union officials made no recommendations to the membership relative to acceptance of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s wage offer. At the time it was finally approved by negotiators, Watts blasted it as "entirely unsatisfactory."

Army Will Enlist Women in Officer Candidate School

If they pass the six-month course at Camp Lee, Va., they will be commissioned in the Organized Reserve Corps and serve at least two years on active duty. At the end of their first year of active duty they may be considered for appointment in the regular Army.

The Army said, however, that distinguished graduates will be considered for appointment as second lieutenant in the regular Army right after graduation. Those who fail the course may be separated from the Army upon request.

To qualify for enlistment for the school, applicants must be citizens of the United States, have two years credited college education, and be single.

How Red Tape Held Up Money Due Widow Of Army Employe

John S. Power, a young civilian economist for the Army in Berlin, was killed in line of duty in a Paris plane crash on January 6 of this year. That was more than 10 months ago.

Surviving him are his wife and three babies, the oldest four. It goes without saying that they needed all the help a grateful Government could give them.

As it turned out, they would have all starved to death if they had waited for a helping hand from Uncle Sam. This is the tragic record of the heartless red-tape artists in the Army Department and the Veterans' Administration on the Power case:

Mrs. Power got her husband's final pay check from the Army only last week, 10 months after he died;

The Army still owes Mrs. Power for official travel by her husband as long ago as September, 1947, 14 months ago;

It took weeks for the Army to do a very simple job—to give Mrs. Power a correct certificate of her husband's death to enable her to file claims. As if the widow didn't have enough trouble, the first three death certificates it gave her were full of errors;

The Veterans' Administration still hasn't paid her the $10,000 national life insurance policy held by her husband, nor has it ruled on a petition for disability which was filed for her husband who lost his hearing in his right ear while he was in the Army, and,

To cap the climax, the Army broke up most of her furniture when it moved it back here from Berlin.

Despite the merciless treatment by the Army in holding up moneys rightfully due her, the Army was most efficient in collecting the $120-a-month rent for her Berlin quarters. And the red-tape-ridden VA is adding insult to injury by continuing to send her late husband bills for his insurance premiums.

The shameful attitude of the Army toward Mrs. Power and her three babies has been one of:

"Let 'em eat paper."

These and other Federal agencies have loaded down the mails with all sorts of forms for her to fill out. Tending to the forms and correspondence with Federal agencies on her husband's death is really a major effort for Mrs. Power.

It was a full seven months after her husband's death before Mrs. Power received her first penny from Uncle Sam. Friends supplied her with credit until she received a settlement from a private insurance company.

The first Government money came from the Bureau of Employes Compensation which had awarded her and her children $113-a-month because her husband was killed on the job. The check she received in August was retroactive to the date of her husband's death.

Mrs. Power says the compensation bureau is one Federal agency "with a heart." It was a pleasure, she said, to do business with them after her horrible experiences with the Army and VA. The compensation people here immediately took an interest in her case and they prodded the Army into action to supply it with the necessary forms to enable it to start payments to Mrs. Power. Otherwise, the Army probably still would be fouled up on her case.

The widow also had a good word to say about the Civil Service retirement division which paid her promptly after it finally received the records on which to make payment from the Army. And like the compensation agency, retirement had to jab the indifferent Army into action.

Can you possibly imagine the Army giving such shabby treatment to the widow and children of one of its officers? Someone would be courtmartialed if it did. Civilians are people, too, but some of the brass wouldn't know about that.

Despite their intolerable delays, the Army and VA can't be blamed for everything. This is another dramatic case that points up the outmoded 1925 employes compensation act. The $113-a-month paid to Mrs. Power is far from enough to keep her and her three babies.

This monthly benefit should be raised substantially, and also, the families of Federal workers who die in the service should be given an immediate death benefit to tide them over the emergency. Some States and cities pay the families six months' salary in such cases, a fair arrangement.

Mrs. Power, a former State Department employe here, is living at 3432 Baker st. se. Her late husband worked in a number of Federal agencies here including the Office of Education, War Production Board, Civilian Conservation Corps, and on Capitol Hill.

Let's hope that this and other stories that have and will appear here on phases of the employes compensation system will result in benefits for the unfortunate people who must depend on it. The new Truman Congress will be social-minded; intent on helping the little fellows. It would be appropriate for it to start off by helping its own employes first.

Davidson Will Remain In Interior Position

By The Associated Press

C. Girard Davidson said yesterday he plans to stay on as Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Commenting on a report by Washington Post Columnist Jerry Kluttz that Davidson would quit next Tuesday to open a law office at Portland, Oreg., the 38-year-old Assistant Secretary told a reporter:

"I have said as long ago as last January that I plan eventually to return to private law practice in Portland.

"I have said nothing, however, about the timing of that rule. At the present time I have no plans for making a change."

City to Observe Armistice Day With Quiet Rites

U. S. Offices, Banks, Schools to Close; Many Wreaths to Be Laid on Memorials

The tempo of routine daily living will be slowed today as Americans pause in honor of the dead of two wars at rest at home and abroad.

Although the Department of Defense has announced there will be no military parades to mark Armistice Day, members of many local organizations will kneel together in prayer—prayers for the war dead and for continued peace.

Schools to Have 2-Day Holiday

Public school students in Washington will be given a holiday today and Friday. Parochial schools in the archdiocese of Washington will be closed today only, as will be the schools of Arlington and Alexandria.

Montgomery County schools will remain open. School principals in Prince Georges County may decide for themselves whether to have classes today. Fairfax County schools will be closed with the exception of the Oak st. school in Falls Church, where pupils in the first, third, fourth and seventh grade have been ordered to report to make up time lost earlier in the semester.

District and Federal employes will have today off. County offices will remain open in Montgomery County but will be closed in Prince Georges County.

Some Courts to Close

In Washington, District Court and the United States Court of Appeals will be closed, but Municipal Court, Traffic Court, D. C. Court and United States Court will be open for lockup cases only. Courts will be closed in nearby Virginia and Maryland, except for Circuit Court in Prince Georges County.

Banks will be closed in greater Washington. Department stores and most retail stores will remain open. Some of the chain grocery stores such as Safeway, Acme and the A & P will be closed. Many District Grocery stores, which are individually owned, will remain open for half or all of the day.

A number of patriotic organizations will lay wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier with Col. Louis H. Renfrow, assistant presidential military aide, representing the White House in the absence of President Truman, now in Key West, Fla.

Colonel Renfrow will lay the President's wreath at 11 a. m., following a minute's silence.

In the Arlington amphitheater, the annual memorial service, sponsored by the American Legion, will begin at 10:55 a. m. National Legion Commander Perry Brown and National President of the Legion's Auxiliary, Mrs. Herbert Goode, will make brief addresses.

Another wreath will be placed on the tomb by Perry Brown of Beaumont, Tex., new national com-

Mock Air Attack Canceled by Weather

The threat of blustery weather has forced postponement of a planned mock air attack of Washington today as a feature of Armistice Day. Instead, the demonstration will be staged Sunday.

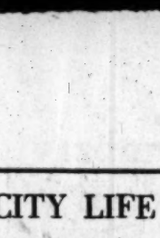
Fighting squadrons of the District, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio National Guard will participate, with Bolling Field their specific target. After the "attack" the "raiders" and "defenders" will unite in an aerial review over the Capital.

At Arlington Farms

Virginia Suit Slated to Tax New Source

By The Associated Press

A test suit to determine whether Virginia can collect income taxes from Federal employes who reside in the State but maintain legal residence elsewhere is shaping up.



Miss Terrill

Louis Frick, attorney for Miss Isabelle Terrill, Galesburg, Ill., now director of a dormitory at the Nation's largest Federal housing project for women at nearby Arlington Farms, Va., said yesterday his client had invited the State to sue her and that it has agreed to do so.

He said Miss Terrill maintains her legal residence in Illinois.

Miss Terrill is director of Alabama Hall, one of six residence halls with capacity of 600 women each at the dormitory project for low-salaried women employes of the Federal Government.

Many Refuse to Pay Tax

Three other halls have been converted into quarters for more than 300 families of War Department employes. All are in Arlington County, Va.

Frick said most of Arlington Farms residents have been refusing to pay Virginia income taxes.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the girls maintain residence in other States, and many of them pay income taxes in their home States," said Frick.

"They are living on land that has been United States property since the end of the Civil War. All the roads in the area were built by the Federal Government, the property is policed by the Federal Government.

"Virginia provides no police or fire protection, maintains no roads, doesn't even collect the garbage. Arlington County refuses ambulance services, provide no coroner's service, refuses to let the girls vote.

No Polling Places in Project

"The women at Arlington Farms feel that if they are to receive no benefits from the State they should not have to pay income taxes to Virginia."

Frick said Virginia authorities agreed to sue Miss Terrill for back taxes as a test case. The action, to collect taxes on 1946 income, will be brought in the Circuit Court in Richmond, he said.

Frick added that there have been no polling places on the project, and the women have voted only by absentee ballot in their home States. He said he heard a report that this year, for the first time, "two or three" women from Arlington Farms were allowed to vote in an Arlington County station.

Home Rule Word Sought Of Truman

The Central Suffrage Conference of Washington will petition President Truman to make District home rule the subject of a special message to Congress, it was decided last night by the conference's board of trustees.

President Wilbur S. Finch suggested that such a petition, to be signed by trustees and officers of the group, would meet with better success than inclusion of the home rule question in Mr. Truman's civil rights program, as is now proposed.

Finch said it is probable that "many Democrats who would vote against the civil rights program in Congress would at least be lukewarm to home rule" if it is handled separately.

The conference also voted to open a campaign to raise about $1000 a month for six months. Funds would be used to open a permanent headquarters for the organization and to expand its program in support of suffrage for District residents.

The trustees, who met at 700 Jackson pl. nw., will hear a committee report at its next meeting November 29 recommending 17 additional nominees to bring the board up to its authorized strength of 50 members.

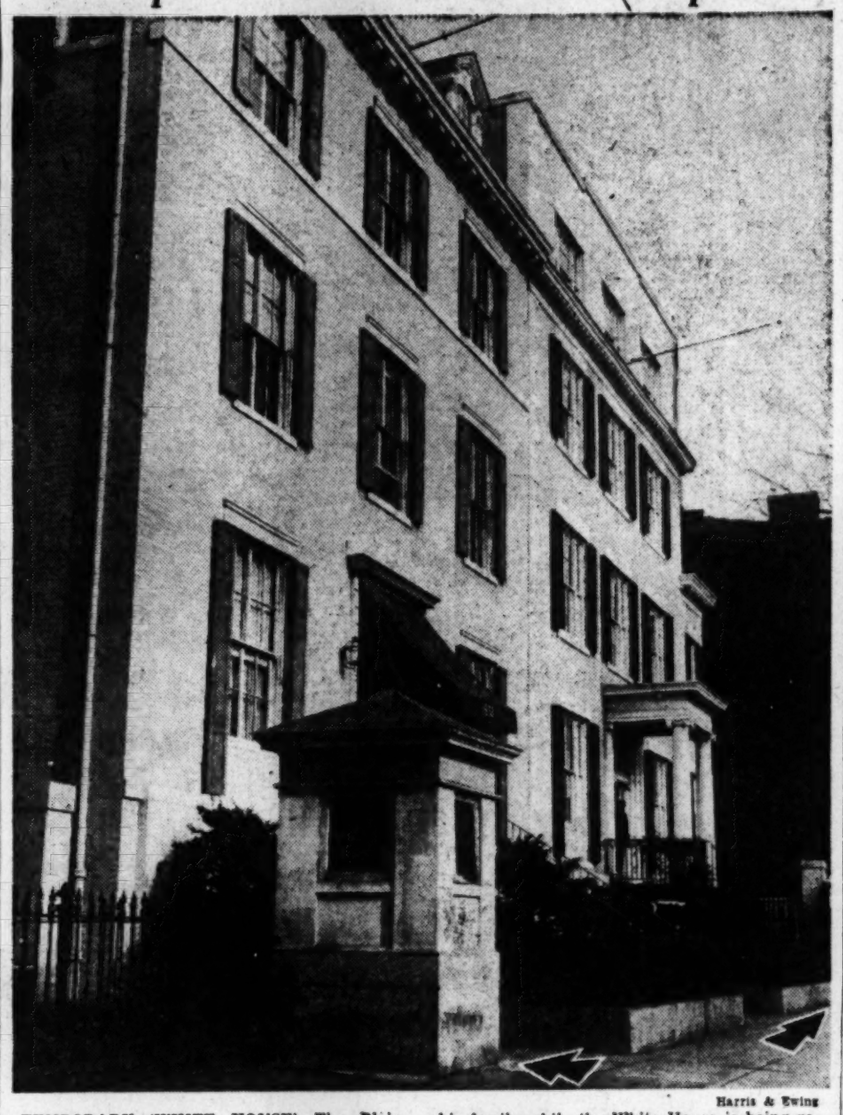
Airforce Puts Jets In Ten Flying Wings

The Air Force is converting 10 Flying Wings B-35 bombers from conventional engine to jet power.

All but three of the 13 B-35s in existence are being changed to jets at the Northrop Aircraft plant, Hawthorne, Calif., the Air Force announced last night. The other three planes with standard engines will be used for test purposes.

An Air Force spokesman said the conversion will not give the older models of the flying wing the same characteristics as the newer jet-powered B-49. The latter has eight jet engines and the B-35 will have but four.

First Family to Occupy Two Blair Mansions Until Repairs to White House Are Completed



Harris & Ewing

TEMPORARY 'WHITE HOUSE'—The Blair House (left) and the adjoining Blair-Lee House will soon be occupied by President Truman and his family while the White House is being repaired. Police guard "boxes" (arrows) were in place outside the historic edifices yesterday

Historic Blair House and adjoining Blair-Lee House, Washington's guest residences for visiting dignitaries, will soon become the Nation's temporary Executive Mansion.

The two beautiful homes, in which the Truman family lived for a short while after Harry Truman became President in 1945, will again become the family's official living quarters, but their stay will be much longer this time.

The First Family will move into the two homes across Pennsylvania ave. from the State Department immediately after President Truman returns from his Florida vacation.

They won't return to the White House until the 150-year-old mansion, which has been condemned as one of the worst firetraps in the country, is repaired.

That won't be until 1949 or early 1950. At present, a survey is being made under a $50,000 grant from Congress to determine what will be the extent and costs of the repairs.

A report must then be made to Congress, which will have to appropriate funds for the overhauling. Cost estimates have already been placed at one million dollars or more.

Although Blair House, furnished simply but beautifully with priceless antiques, and Blair-Lee House, furnished comfortably like a middle-class American home of today, will provide spacious and comfortable living quarters for the Trumans, there will be no space to carry on a heavy White House social season.

Two small adjoining drawing rooms would be the only possible place to hold receptions, and the dining rooms do not come anywhere near the size of the State Dining Room in the White House, Mrs. Victoria Geaney, housekeeper for both houses, explained.

The White House has already announced there will be none of the glittering formal events which traditionally highlight the year for Washington's diplomatic and social set until the repairs are finished.

The President will continue working in the Executive Mansion. Both the east and the west wings, where official business is conducted, are comparatively new and in good condition.

Known for his enjoyment of walking, he is expected to repeat the short strolls across Pennsylvania avenue each morning and evening, just as he did when he first became President.

It has not yet been determined just which bedrooms and such in the two mansions will be selected by each member of the Truman family, Mrs. Geaney said. Somewhat in a flurry by last minute preparations, she explained that she had received official notice that the Trumans will move in only a few days ago.

Actually, there is little to be done to the mansions, which Mrs. Geaney keeps ship-shape at all times. A few workmen have been busy for several days painting and cleaning up part of the Blair-Lee House, but the Blair House is ready as it stands.

One big change has been noticed on the exterior. Two sentry boxes, which will hold White House policemen, have been set up in front of the two houses. The areaway around the steps leading to the front doors will probably be fenced off with the only approach to the steps past the sentry boxes.

The temporary executive mansion is almost as steeped in history as is the White House itself.

Blair House was constructed by Joseph Lovell, Surgeon General in the Army, about 1824. In 1837, it was purchased by Francis Preston Blair, then editor of the Globe newspaper, who was brought to Washington by President Andrew Jackson.

The Blair-Lee House was the residence of Admiral Samuel Phillips Lee, who married Betty Blair, daughter of Francis Preston Blair.

In 1864, Blair presented Blair House to his son, Montgomery Blair, who became Postmaster General in President Lincoln's cabinet.

It was during these years that Robert E. Lee was offered and refused command of the Union Army in a small office just off the entrance hall of the large mansion. It was also in this home that Admiral Farragut was selected to command the Federal fleet at New Orleans.

The house at one time was leased to George Bancroft and later to John Y. Mason, both of whom served as Cabinet officers. After Mason came Senator Thomas Ewing, later Secretary of the Interior, whose daughter was married there to William T. Sherman, the famous general.

Through the years, a procession of famous visitors passed across its threshold. The visitors have been no less distinguished since Blair House was taken over by the Government in 1942. President Prado of Peru was its first official tenant. King George of Greece, Queen Wilhelmina of Holland and King Peter of Yugoslavia have been among the many outstanding guests to stay there.

Blair-Lee House was acquired by the Government in 1943 to provide added facilities for distinguished visitors to this country. Unlike Blair House, with its furnishings of Victorian design, its chairs and chests of Chinese Chippendale and its early American silver, Blair Lee House is not a museum piece. It contains many various styles of furnishings used in middle-class American homes, with an eye mostly toward comfort.

New $20 Bills Show Truman's Balcony

The controversial White House balcony, which President Truman won't be able to enjoy until the Executive Mansion is made livable again, soon will appear on the back of the new $20 bill.

The current $20 bills show the White House as it was in 1929. The new ones will show the added balcony and chimneys, and the grounds will appear darker because of more shrubbery and trees, the Treasury Department announced. The picture of Andrew Jackson on the front of the bill will remain unchanged.

Intruder Rapes Lodger, 19, in Wheatley YW

A man stole into the Phyllis Wheatley Negro YWCA, 901 Rhode Island ave. nw., early yesterday and raped a 19-year-old girl lodger.

The victim, an employe of the War Assets Administration, told vice squad detectives she awakened in her third-floor room at about 1:50 a. m.

She said a man was kneeling beside her bed fondling her. She said the man put the point of a knife against her back and raped her.

During the attack, he warned her:

"If you scream, it will be your last scream."

The girl screamed after the man had left the room and aroused others on the third floor. Police said the rapist apparently fled down a rear fire escape.

The girl was taken to Gallinger Hospital where an examination definitely established that she had been raped.

The girl described her attacker as a dark-skinned Negro, about 5 feet 11, weighing 150 pounds, of slender build, with a heavy mustache and in need of a shave. She said he was wearing a dark T-shirt.

Suicide Ruled In Channel and Leap Deaths

Certificates of suicide were issued yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, in the deaths of George E. Donaldson, 29-year-old Washington correspondent, and Charles Bumbalough, 22-year-old World War II veterans from Cookeville, Tenn.

Donaldson of Syracuse, N. Y., a former reporter for the Syracuse Herald Journal and employed by the James J. Butler News Agency here for the past 18 months, plunged from his twelfth-floor office in the National Press Building to an alley Sunday morning.

Dr. MacDonald said he decided tto issue the certificate after a conference with members of the man's family, homicide squad detectives and Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner. The body was sent to Syracuse Monday for funeral services.

Bumbalough's body was recovered from Georgetown Channel Tuesday. Recently treated as a mental patient at Fort Belvoir station hospital, he formerly was stationed at Vint Hill farm, a signal corps radio center near Warrenton, Va. Doctors said he was a "depressive neurotic."

Car Buyer Gyp Of 4.4 Million Seen by Macy

Capitol Hearings Set on Charges of Excessive Profits By Some Dealers

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) feels that some metropolitan Washington automobile dealers have victimized their customers for a total of some $4,400,000.

Earle O. Baker, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, feels that Congressman Macy's conclusion is greatly exaggerated.

The issue will be the subject of a formal two-day hearing at the Capitol Monday and Tuesday. Thirty witnesses have been called. Among them will be two car dealers. Testimony from others who want to testify will be received within the time limits of the subcommitte in charge of the hearing. Macy heads the subcommittee. Names of witnesses will be made public Sunday.

3½ Months' Inquiry

In a press release yesterday, Macy pointed out that his subcommittee to Investigate Questionable Trade Practices has been looking into the sales and distribution policies of Washington automobile dealers for the past 3½ months.

He said the investigation had gone into the operations of a representative cross-section of automobile dealers in metropiltan Washington, covering the first seven months of 1948.

He said "we have traced thousands of automobile transactions representing approximately 60 per cent of the new car sales in this area during that period.

"As a result, we have arrived at certain conclusions which we believe are worthy of further consideration by the Congress, the automobile industry, and by the public.

Most Conservative

"We have attempted to be most conservative in interpreting our findings, and have resolved every doubt in favor of the dealers."

Macy said that new car dealers used to take a loss on trade-in autos, but now they are selling the trade-ins at an average of 43 per cent more than they have allowed on them. He called it "an unconscionable markup."

"Trade-ins have been undervalued by the dealer on the average of at least $300," Macy said. "It is estimated that during the first seven months of 1948 this practice has cost the people of the metropolitan area more than two million dollars."

Macy added that from complaints made to the committee "it appears that the new car purchaser does not want at least 50 per cent of the extras and accessories with which his car has been equipped.

"Yet we find that on the average, a new car carries $286 worth of such items. It is, therefore, estimated that during the first seven months of 1948 the people in this area purchased approximately $2,400,000 worth of extras which they did not want."

Macy declared that "during our investigation we have found that some dealers have made every effort to deal fairly and honestly with the public. On the other hand, we have found other dealers who resort to every questionable trade practice in order to squeeze the greatest amount of money from the anxious purchaser."

Speaking for the Washington Automotive Trade Association, Baker declared after reading Macy's statement that "I certainly would question a lot of the findings and would question the interpretation of the findings.

"The committee seems to be taking the attitude that a dealer should not make any profit on a trade-in, and I do not agree with that.

"The average cost of handling a trade-in is 20 per cent of the amount allowed, and you need a 20 per cent markup to break even.

"As for accessories, I don't know the policies of individual dealers, but I do know from my own experience that people buy what they order, and if you give them a chance to order, they'll order plenty."

He said his main objection to the Macy statement was not to the figures, but the statement the public had been victimized.

She Was Jailed

Father Gets Sons, Mother Is Released

Mrs. Rose Barbara Moore, 39, was released yesterday from custody after she had been jailed for failing to turn over her two sons to her former husband.

Mrs. Moore

But the mother was deprived of the right to see her sons at least until Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws acts in her contempt hearing.

The children earlier this year were awarded to the father, John A. Moore, 43, of Mount Airy, Md. The mother, who could see the children on weekends, has persistently claimed in the court that the children wish to remain with her. She was jailed Tuesday after refusing to turn them over to Moore. Under orders of Judge Laws, Mrs. Moore was placed in custody and a marshal took the children to the father.

The mother came into court yesterday, wan and red-eyed, and told the court that she was willing to give up the children, but that they did not want to go.

She said that when Moore came for them, James, 6, was ill abed. John, 9, refused to go with Moore, she said.

"Johnnie said he didn't want to go. I opened the door and Johnnie wouldn't go. He said he didn't want to go with his daddy. I told him that he should go and that everything would be all straightened out," Mrs. Moore said.

She was represented by Charles E. Ford, appointed by the court to defend her.

Moore admitted that the child did not care to go and quoted the mother as saying, "You've been pushing the children around long enough. I won't send them with you."

Mrs. Moore divorced her husband in 1942 and later gave up the children to Moore. He has three children by a subsequent marriage.

Judge Laws set Tuesday for a continuance of the contempt hearing in releasing Mrs. Moore, but ordered that she not see the children until the case is settled.

Charles Patton Henry, attorney for the father, declared, "We don't want her punished. You can't blame a mother for wanting her children. If she would cooperate, everything would work out."

Driver Permit Appeal Plan Under Study

A proposal by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp of a change in revocation procedures on auto driver permits, has been approved in principle by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young and Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, it was learned yesterday.

Keneipp, who outlined the plan at a meeting of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association Monday night, will meet with West Friday to discuss details preliminary to its consideration by the Board of Commissioners.

At present, District driver permits are revoked or suspended by the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits for various charges, and no indication is given of the right of appeal, Keneipp said. A determined motorist, however, may appeal the action to the board, which then sits in judgment on its own action, Keneipp pointed out.

The traffic director's proposal calls for establishment of a "show cause" hearing before a representative of the traffic department, except when revocation is mandatory under congressional acts.

The representative would then recommend a decision to Keneipp, whereupon the motorist may ask the Board of Commissioners to review it. Later, he may carry it to the courts. The revocation board would be eliminated.

The Commissioners would be given a complete file of the driver's record and a transcript of the hearing proceedings.

Area News in Brief

Comet May Glitter Just Before Sun-up

Greater Washington residents may be able to see the new comet during the next several days, providing the weather is clear and the comet is going in the right direction.

John S. Hall, head of the equatorial division of the Naval Observatory, said last night the best time to look is just before sunrise toward the southeast.

There is a possibility, he said, that the comet will show itself just before dawn today.

"We have no information that definitely shows which way the comet is moving," Hall said. If traveling away from the earth the comet will fade, while if moving toward the earth it will be visible for some time.

The comet, known as 1948-L, was discovered Sunday by an astronomer in South Africa.

Spirit of Spain Brought Here By Dancers

By Paul Hume

"Rhythms of Spain" were seen and heard in Constitution Hall last night in the National Symphony Orchestra's second evening of Contrasts in Dancing.

Federico Rey, Pilar Gomez and Tina Ramirez danced. Carlos Montoya played but such guitar, and Raymond Sachse was an indefatigable pianist. The sounds and movements of Spanish dancing, both classical and popular, filled the stage. Flamenco, malaguena, Basque, and all the rest brought color to one of the Nation's most colorless stages.

The dancers seemed filled with the authentic spirit of Spanish folk lore and music. Rey won special applause for his Bolero, for which he had to give two encores. Montoy's guitar playing was as artistic as the most spell-binding moments of our great concert artists.

An orchestra, even small, would have helped materially to overcome a vitiating influence cast by the monotony of the piano. Nor did Sachse's lack-luster approach to this most colorful music help the situation.

We appreciate the orchestra's willingness to bring new artists to Washington, but hope the next time they will attempt to surround them with more of the accoutrements of their art.

Under the circumstances, the folk dances fared best, with their simpler demands upon musical background. Falla's magnificent score for "El Amor Brujo," written for large orchestra and singer, has been seen here before, when presented by Lisa Gardiner. It cannot succeed when given under the meager rations available last evening.

Wit and sparkle came in the lightest moments but circumstances made these all too few.

His ship was sunk in 1916 and he was taken to a German prison camp at Westphalia, Germany, and was later moved to Hamburg, where he worked on the dock installations until the war's end.

After the war he served in the Merchant Marine as a chief engineer for about six years, later joining the War Department as a civil engineer with the Corps of Engineers. During his 10 years on this job he saw much service on the levees along the Mississippi River.

Mr. Hanbury was a member of Great Bridge, Va. Masonic Lodge and of Almas Temple. He also served as a member of the school board of the Camp Springs Elementary School.

Father Piette, Historian Here, Dies in Canada

The Rev. Maximin Charles Piette, O. F. M., a resident member of the Academy of American Franciscan History in Bethesda, Md., died last Saturday in Montreal, Canada, it was learned here yesterday. He was 63 years old.

Mary Haworth's Mail

With Children Launched, Wife Uncertainly Faces Problem, Long Evaded, of Dealing Appropriately With Loved Husband's Affairs

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Now that the last of our children has left home, my husband and I are alone together once more, in middle age after 20-odd years' marriage; and I am wondering what to do about an emotional problem that has existed between us almost from the first.

Ben is and always has been a delightful kind companion; also more "alive" than most men. He has worked hard, built us a good home, given the children every advantage, but even in our first year of marriage I learned that he was being unfaithful to me, and that almost any woman who wished could have him.

This was a tremendous shock and led to many anguished talks with Ben, and the gist of his replies, then and later, was always that he was truly sorry these things had reached my ears, as I had and always would have all his love, that the other women meant nothing to him and a new affair was just an exciting pastime.

Should She Settle for Imperfection?

I WAS expecting our first child, felt pretty well tied and hardly knew what to do; but as time passed I saw that Ben loved the children and they adored him, and while I gave some thought to divorce, I doubted that I would gain by it. With his great charm and magnetism, he probably would have married again soon, and despite everything I still loved him and didn't want to live without him, strange as that may seem.

Recently I read an article on "Love in America" by Raoul de Roussy de Sales in which he says: "That the relationship between men and women offers a wide scale of variations seldom occurs to the experts. It is not necessarily true that there is but one form of love worth bothering about, and that if you cannot get the de luxe model, with a life guarantee of perfect functioning, nothing else is worthwhile."

Ben has not changed in any respect, except that he is older, of course; and he always has been the only man in the world for me. So I wonder, should I let things ride and try to revise my own thinking in line with M. de Sales' philosophy; and tell myself, "If I can't have de luxe model love, then I will make-do on what I have." What do you think of M. de Sales' views? Please answer soon. E. B.

She Is Governed by Her Dependency

DEAR E. B.: M. de Sales' comment, cited above, seems a rather blank generality which brings no new intelligence to the adult thinker,—at least if judged as it stands, without support of his whole text, which I haven't read yet, but shall look into presently.

As for what course you should pursue in relation to Ben, it seems to me the die was cast years ago. You are going to stay with him because your emotional dependency upon him to give your existence pattern and significance permits no other choice. You would be lost, in the sense of having no "will to live" if your daily routine were dissevered from his.

But I suppose you've always absolved your needful acceptance of him "as is" by theorizing that you anguished along with his infidelities primarily "for the children's sake," and that when the last of them was grown and gone, you very well might ring in a great day of reckoning with him, assuming he hadn't reformed and renounced his affairs by then, thus cleaning the slate for your full forgiveness in the nick of time.

More Perfect Love the Basic Answer

NOW the day for reckoning has arrived per your time-table. Ben hasn't changed in any respect, and again, as in the first year of marriage, you don't know what to do—simply because your helpless attachment to this lovable fellow who never cared to regulate his libidinal urges, frustrates your long-abiding hurt desire to make him pay dearly, in terms of woebegone suffering equal to your own, for rejection-anxieties he visited on you via his affairs.

As you reasoned at first, what price divorce? The prospect of living without Ben is insupportable to you, and if you were to cast him off, doubtless he would marry again without delay, in which case there is the probability of his having more children to

Fans, Capes Dress Up Old Frocks

Ball Is Held at Shoreham

Marines, 'Round the World, Cut Their Birthday Cake Alight With 173 Candles

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

LAST NIGHT in Shanghai, London, Havana, San Diego, Honolulu, Bermuda, Tokyo, Alaska, the Eastern Mediterranean, the Mariannas and West Indian Isles, as well as every Latin American capital and right here in the Shoreham ballroom, some 92,000 United States Marines celebrated the Corps' 173d birthday.

The birthday party follows the same ritual wherever Leathernecks get together. First the drum and bugles troop the line, take post—in other words clear the dance floor. Then the national standard, the gold and scarlet flag of the Marines are carried in. The Marines' standard is an impressive, extremely moving sight—it is aflutter with streamers, one for each of the Corps' many, many battles, and weighted with every Marine citation. After the flags have been saluted, a paragraph from the Marine Manual is read which bids every Marine to uphold the Corps' high tradition.

Then the birthday cake, in Washington some hundred and fifty pounds of goodness mixed up by the Quantico bakery, is carried in. Aflame with the requisite number of candles, the cake is carried high, escorted by two colonels, lieutenant colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants, Warrant officers and two women captains in the Marines. The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Clifton Cates, then cuts the cake, with the same sword he used at his wedding.

A postcake Washington touch was a series of historical tableaux showing Marine uniforms from their founding by the Continental Congress back in 1775 to the newest, 1945 outfit—combat dungarees and bulbous helmet. Some five to six hundred Marines attended the Birthday Ball and among the more picturesque guests was Col. B. W. Leicester of the Royal Marines, a big chunk of man some 6-foot-3, with dreamy handlebar moustachios. The Marine Band, some 150 strong, played for dancing. They are the only United States military component, incidentally, wearing scarlet uniforms. Though their uniforms are patterned after the British, their tenor drums are an individual specialty—and are beaten with remarkable display of twirling sticks.

Electionisms

LAST roundup of electionisms runs a catholic gamut: Around town those on intimate terms with their Bible find in Revelations, Chapter III, Verse XVI, why Truman, not Dewey, earned the presidential tap: "So then because thou art lukewarm and neither cold nor hot I will spew thee out of my mouth" . . . Brightest greeting of the week was a congressional secretary's cheery query "And what have you been doing since H-T Day?" . . . Nice payoff for a genuine Claghorn happened at the Union Station welcome-home. A Southern Senator, noted for his outspoken anti-Truman sentiments, trying to scramble back on the bandwagon, became bogged in the dense crowds. Spying Presidential Aide General Vaughan, he panted, "I'm Senator So-and-So, how can I get out front?" The General, giving the moisty legislator a chilly onceover, drawled, "Senator, I don't think you can make it!"

"Whose fine Italian hand arranged that?" cracked a smart curbstone kibitzer as a trio of Cabinet members, rated top three in campaign innocuous desuetude, rode side by side in the Station-White House Truman cavalcade.

Appointment suggested by many—a place in the "Kitchen Cabinet" for Perle Mesta . . . Happiest Cabinet member, former Governor of Massachusetts Republican Maurice Tobin, who was kidded plenty when he took over Labor a few months ago. Cartoonists, columnists, plain reporters wondered why he bothered to unpack.

First Lady Gives Doll For Thrift Shop Sale

Since the early thirties First Ladies have contributed dolls to the annual Thrift Shop sale. Yesterday at 11 a. m., Mrs. Truman drove to the Thrift Shop and presented a photogenic little doll wit' golden bangs, to be sold on November 30 with other Thrift Sho articles for the benefit of the sick and needy children of Washington.

Mrs. Truman was greeted yesterday at the door by Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, president of the Thrift Shop. Other volunteer workers at the Thrift Shop present included Mrs. Benjamin Cain, Mrs. Francis C. Almirall, Mrs. Charles L. Sturtevant and Mrs. W. Chapin Huntington.

The First Lady posed for several pictures. She was smartly dressed in a black suit and small black hat. A fur piece, a gold chain necklace and a red leather alligator bag completed her costume. The presentation of the doll was one of the last things on Mrs. Truman's schedule before leaving today for Key West, Fla., to join the President.

Before leaving the First Lady will be given an orchid corsage flown from Paris. The flowers will be presented by Belgium Ambassador Baron Robert Silvercruys on behalf of Prince Charles of Belgium. Due to bad flying conditions the corsage had to take a round-about trip to Washington. It went first to New York, then to Boston, back to New York and then to the Capital.

In 1930 Mrs. Hoover purchased a Thrift Shop doll for her small granddaughter. The following year she contributed to the sale, dolls dressed in costumes identical with those of her three grandchildren. When Mrs. Roosevelt entered the White House, she too bought dolls to help swell the funds of the shop, which is operated by six well known children's charities.

This year, as last year, the women of a number of embassies and legations are cooperating in the sale. Already received are dolls from Peru, Siam, France, Poland and Greece. Proceeds from the sale of dolls will go to provide shelter and hospital care for Washington children. Those who wish to donate dolls for this sale should send them before November 15 to Thrift Shop at 809 9th st. nw.

Proceeds from the sale of dolls go to benefit needy children of Washington. Mrs. Groner is president of the Thrift Shop Board

Vassar Freshmen Poll

Peace, Civil Rights Voted Issues of Today

By Genevieve Reynolds

This year's crop of Vassar College freshmen voted peace and civil rights as the two most important questions confronting this Nation, Dr. Mabel Newcomer, chairman of the college's economics department, told members of the Washington Vassar Club in a luncheon address yesterday.

She said that the decision was made during an indoctrination course planned by the students themselves.

"Training for responsible citizenship is the aim of education now," explained Dr. Newcomer. "Back in the 20s colleges emphasized job preparation. Then in the 30s when jobs were scarce during the depression, it was fashionable to train students for leisure or marriage."

Educational trends today are toward general rather than specialized training, she said. In fact, there's a tendency away from specialization. To meet the general trend there's an increase in formal requirements that would give a broader basis of learning and more freedom in the selection of the final major, according to the economics head.

"Liberal arts schools are doing a lot of soul searching and thinking about the problem of educating for what," she declared. "No longer can these schools take themselves for granted."

"In order to train for responsible citizenship," said Dr. Newcomer, "colleges should have students with a wide variety of backgrounds with emphasis on diversity of religion, race and geography.

"To obtain the diversity needed among Vassar students at least 25 per cent of the student body must of necessity be on scholarships because of the high tuition," she continued. "Majority of the scholarships must be for the full amount otherwise the needed variety in backgrounds will not be reached."

Dr. Newcomer said that the students themselves want racial diversity but that some of the same students who are tolerant of racial differences raise their eyebrows and look askance at the small town girl from the Midwest whose manners and speech accents are different.

She pointed out that there are no discriminatory bars against the admission of Negroes to Vassar and that the college would welcome a greater number than now is enrolled.

Mrs. John D. Stewart, president of the local alumnae group, presented the speaker and presided.

Lady Rama Rau Tells Indian Women's Progress

By Nicha Soure

Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Ambassador from India, at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's Advertising Club of Washington yesterday, traced the development of the All India Women's Conference.

The conference, which is comparable to the General Federation of Women's Clubs in the United States, began approximately 50 years ago, with the primary purpose of removing social evils said Lady Rama Rau. It has grown, she said, until today it is one of the most important organizations in India.

Lady Rama Rau told the club members of the four major undertaking of the organization. The Lady Irwin College in New Delhi was established as a school of higher education which specialized in the home sciences. The newspaper, Light, is published monthly expressing the views and reporting the works of the women of India. Previously only published in English, Lady Rama Rau said there was a need "to have it published in our language, too. Three years ago we started this parallel edition which now sells three times as many copies."

The relief project following the famine in Bengal in 1943 gave the conference their third major undertaking. The organization established eight homes for the destitute children of that area.

Since most of the work was concentrated in the cities of India, the conference felt that they should do something for the 750,000 villages of India, some of which were almost entirely primitive in character, Lady Rama Rau said.

When an Englishwoman donated a medical van to the conference that was the means by which the women could reach the villages in their fourth great project. Their work was so successful that donations enabled them to buy a second van. The War Purposes Funds offered two more vans and Mrs. Lester Hosheiner of New York gave the conference a fifth van in the memory of her son who had died in India during the war.

"This work might seem little to you in the light of what has to be accomplished," Lady Rama Rau said, "but it is the groundwork that must be done for the relieving of suffering in India."

Zonta Celebrate 27th Birthday

Zonta Club of Washington celebrated its twenty-seventh birthday yesterday with a luncheon at Dodge Hotel.

The program featured a fashion show by three of the members, and a talk by Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the Marjorie Webster Junior College.

Miss Webster told the members that now that the club is "growing out of its twenties and growing more serious" it should stress the development of good leadership.

And for the fashion show Miss Anna E. Muddiman, Miss Frances P. Marshall and Miss Anne T. Kelly modeled gowns that were in vogue when they joined Zonta. Guests were seated according to how long they had been members.

A birthday cake with 27 candles was presented by the treasurer, Miss Florence E. Thompson. Mrs. Alice C. Sheldon, president, gave corsages to the two charter members who are still active in Zonta, Miss Emma T. Hahm and Mrs. Nan R. Street. And Miss Marguerite Rawalt, vice president, presented a rose to each of the past presidents.

"Only a Rose" was sung by Miss Florence Sindell with accompaniment by Mrs. Nancy Poore Tufts.

Women Voters to Study Taxes

The National League of Women Voters announced yesterday that it would begin a two year analysis and study of federal taxes and expenditures as they relate to the national economy. Adoption of the project came at the organization's national board meeting now in session here at the Y. W. C. A.

Thirteen conferences have been slated to train leaders to direct the campaign in the 630 local leagues throughout the country. Two of these were held in Philadelphia and Chicago last week. Others are scheduled in New York, Boston, Cleveland, Atlanta, St. Louis, Denver, Portland, San Francisco, Pasadena and Dallas.

In the local conferences league leaders will utilize a new pamphlet "The 40-Billion-Dollar Question" and a recent filmstrip "Uncle Sam'sh Budget."

Miss Anna Lord Strauss, national president, in issuing the league's program, said, "Our organization has become increasingly concerned about the economy of the United States. We are convinced that the high cost of living cannot be remedied by a few isolated measures.

"We realize that the problem of booms and busts cannot be eliminated by Government fiscal policy alone, but it can be a major factor in working toward a more stabilized economy," she continued. "The league's work in local and State taxation problems and our observance of the effects of financing a second world war have made us aware of the need of education and understanding of the subject."

Ask Anne

About Lime Meringue Pie

I have a wine colored sofa which has been stained by the baby. After I tried to remove the stain with well-known cleaning agents, the material seemed to have a white substance on the surface. How can I remove this? Could the same process also be used to remove stains from mattress covers? I. R.

Does the white substance look powdery? If so, try brushing the stained area with a stiff brush. If this doesn't completely remove it, sponge the spot with a solution of one part soapless shampoo and five parts water. To this add three tablespoons of white vinegar to each quart of the solution. Sponge well and rinse thoroughly. Work quickly and do not use any more water in the process than is absolutely necessary to avoid soaking the padding. Place in the out-of-doors or turn a fan onto the piece to dry thoroughly. This treatment will also remove any soil which is present at the spot cleaned, so it may look lighter than the rest of the sofa when dry.

Yes, the same method can be used on the mattress cover.

How could I fill several long hairline cracks on my kitchen wall and ceiling before repainting? Our house is about two years old. The cracks aren't very noticeable, none of the plaster has fallen away, but I would like to prevent it from getting any worse. E. W.

According to an excellent article on patching holes and cracks in plaster on page 212 of the November, 1948 issue of "Better Homes and Gardens", "Tiny surface cracks are easily filled by thoroughly wetting them down and then thumping them full of patching plaster or plaster of paris." The patching plaster can be purchased inexpensively in comparatively small quantities at building supply and hardware stores. If the plaster is loosening around the cracks, I'd suggest you remove the loose plaster and apply a fresh patch. For step by step directions with pictures to do the job, see the article mentioned above.

Could you tell me what to do with a fiber rug that has faded badly, and is also quite soiled? Could it be washed and painted. If painted, what paint should be used? It is not worn. J. C. C.

Since you plan to paint the rug it will not be necessary to wash it. Just go over the rug with a vacuum cleaner to remove loose dirt. To paint it, use a good grade of enamel or awning paint, thinned with one part turpentine to three parts of paint. Use an inexpensive brush for the operation and work the paint well into the fibers of the rug. Before starting to paint, place several layers of newspapers under the rug to protect the floor from any paint which may come through.

Will you tell me how to wash a child's corduroy dress without ruining the collar? The dress is red and the collar is white. The collar is not removable. C. B.

I know of no way to wash the dress so that the dress will not fade into the white collar as long as it remains attached (unless, of course, the red material is color fast). It is not much of a task to remove these collars. Just rip it from the dress, using the bias binding with which it is attached to bind the collar. Or, if the bias binding is the color of the dress, use it to bind the neckline and buy new white bias to bind the rough collar edge. Thus bound, the collar can be tacked lightly to the dress and very easily removed at each washing.

I think this is the recipe which M. T. wants in the Date Torte. It is a recipe handed down by my mother and makes a wonderful dessert for the emergency shelf as it can be made, wrapped in wax paper, and kept for weeks.

CRUMBLE DATE TORTE

1 cup stale bread crumbs
1 cup sugar
1 cup chopped dates (either fresh or dried)
1 cup nuts (pecan or English walnuts)
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
Pinch of salt

Combine all dry ingredients. Break eggs into bowl and stir until creamy. Line a square cake pan with paper, add baking mixture and bake in slow oven. When cool, break into pieces size of thumb nail and mix with whipped cream before serving. Add extra spoonful of cream on top and also cherry.

Do not mix with the whipped cream until ready to serve, as it should be crisp and crunchy, not soft and mushy. L. M. F.

To J. M. M. and "Inquirer": We regret that your questions were a little out of our line and we do not have answers available.

I'd like to suggest to the lady who wrote in about how to get started on selling toys that she read the article, "When Mama Means Business," in the November issue of Woman's Day. INTERESTED READER.

In February of this year, some milk was spilled on our light blue mohair davenport. Water wouldn't remove the stain which was left, and we've been afraid to try anything else for fear of ruining the upholstery. Can this stain be removed by home methods? The stain is very unsightly, and has become hard and stiff. E. F. G.

Powdered pepsin, sold at some drug stores, will usually soften milk stains, even old ones, so that they can be sponged out with clear water. First be sure there is no soap (in case you used it in the previous sponging) left in the spot, as this will stop the action of the pepsin. Sponge the stain with lukewarm water, then sprinkle with pepsin powder. Let it stand for half an hour, keeping the spot damp. Or mix the pepsin with water (2 teaspoons to 1 pint lukewarm water) and sponge the stain with it. When spot softens, sponge well with clear water.

If the person inquiring through the "Ask Anne" column will get in touch with any women's auxiliary group in the Episcopal church, they will either send the clothes to an Indian mission or give her an address for this purpose. The Indian mission at Fort Defiance, Ariz., (Navajo) is in great need of clothing, etc. M. H. C.

Can you or your readers give me any information about a picture I once saw on a calendar called "Philosopher's Son"? It is a picture of a boy who has an unusual, appealing expression. L. B.

I do not know who this picture is by or where you might obtain a copy. Can you give L. B. any help on this, readers?

Budget Hint For the Homemaker

When every penny counts in the budget, small savings are most important. Instead of using beaten egg for the foundation when dipping fish into breadcrumbs preparatory to frying, make a paste of flour and water and dip the fish into this and then into the crumbs. Fry at once. You probably will not notice any difference and it works just as well with tomatoes, eggplants, squash, etc.

Cooking Cues

Be sure to cook dried fruit in the water in which it was soaked so as to utilize valuable nutrients.

When vegetables are to be steamed only enough boilingwater is added to supply steam during the cooking.

Recipes for custard often suggest that the milk be scalded first because this shortens the cooking time.

In making a meringue for a pudding or pie two tablespoons of sugar per egg white is, in general, the best amount to use. Too little sugar gives a meringue lacking in flavor and one that is not as fluffy or as tender as it should be.

In slicing refrigerator cookies for baking, use a thin bladed, very sharp knife; cut with a sawing motion and do not press too hard or the shape of the roll may be lost.

Don't Rush Them

There are many things that may cause a child to be shy. Sometimes it is hard, indeed, to see what it could be. One thing is sure: seldom is a youngster helped to rid himself of shyness by direct, aggressive methods. Insisting that he mix with other children, that he rush into whatever it is that he fears and using threats of any kind cannot be counted on to overcome shyness.

True, in some instances, children may seem to overcome their reluctance to play with others or their unwillingness to go into stores or other places where there are crowds of people because they have been forced to do so. As frequently as not, however, it is only outward adjustment. They are still acutely unhappy and ill-at-ease inside.

The gradual, easy approach is sounder. Encouraging friendliness with one or two children at first, making trips to small shops and, in each instance, trying to be sure that there are some especially pleasing phases of the experience are methods that will bring the lasting changes.

Philippine Woman Senator Visiting Here

Senator Geronima T. Pecson, first woman senator in the Philippines, is visiting in Washington for a short while, conferring with education officials and studying educational legislation and administration. Senator Pecson is chairman of the joint congressional committee on education in the Philippines, and one of the Filipino delegates to the UNESCO conference which opens November 15 in Beirut, Lebanon. She has been a school teacher for 20 years, and is one of the leaders of the woman suffrage movement.

Active in the underground during the war, Mrs. Pecson opened the first emergency hospital in Manila and started giving first aid, food and clothing within half an hour after the liberation forces took Manila. At the outbreak of the war in 1941, she directed Red Cross operations in Zamboanga, Mindanao, and she was attached to General MacArthur's forces as civilian welfare worker.

During her stay in Washington, Senator Pecson is being widely entertained. Saturday evening the Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, gave a dinner at the embassy in her honor, and the following afternoon, a tea was given for her by the Philippine American Women's Association. At the tea, Senator Pecson shared honors with Mrs. Narciso Ramos, who is leaving soon for the Argentine, and Mrs. Emilio Abello, wife of the new Minister of the Philippines. The outgoing Minister and Mrs. Ramos entertained at a cocktail party for Senator Pecson on Monday afternoon.

The senator will broadcast greetings to President Quirino on the ocasion of his birthday on November 15.

The group, meeting at Hine Junior High School, 7th and C sts. se., in a resolution, voted to "support firmly" the District agencies putting up the fight.

In other business, the association favored the reappointment of Adelbert W. Lee to the District School Board and recommended licensing and prescribing of distinctive uniforms for practical nurses in the District.

Armistice Day Brings Back Old Memories

I know that I shall pause today
Remembering that, far away,
I stood upon a shell-torn hill
Where things grew quiet, tense and still;
And all I knew was pain.

For there I saw our fallen dead,
Still as the hour, wounds raw red;
And thinking of the world today
I find it in my heart to say:
"Please, God—not that again!"

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The Dorothy Kilmer fund is a wonderful idea, and I sincerely hope you'll reach your goal.

Don't be discouraged by the slow days. Many people are just dilatory; I'm a good example.

Just be patient and keep the fund alive. I'm sure that many people intended to contribute on the very first day, but just didn't get around to it.

I know that's what happened to me—but when you jog our memories, we finally write out the envelope and drop it in the mail.

So keep the fund going until you reach your goal, and let's help Dorothy get out of that wheelchair.

E. R. Dunman,
2107 N. Rolfe st.,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Miss Dunman:

Thanks for the encouragement. Fund raising is out of my line, and it puzzles me to learn from older hands among my colleagues that it takes many reminders to put over a campaign of this kind.

I hate to be repetitious about it—especially because I think that people who turn to this corner want to be entertained. The world is too full of grief and troubles as it is, and we need some escape from them.

But I can't turn my back on a project of this kind when it isn't even half finished yet.

And I can't let it peter out when I know that so many District Liners think that it's a job that needs doing.

Several people have written recently to say: "I thought you'd get 10,000 helping hands right away, so I didn't bother. But I guess too many of us figured as I did, and held back, waiting for the other fellow. So I'm sending my buck to Dorothy today."

I'm glad you wrote as you did, Miss Dunman, because it gives me a chance to answer those folks with:

If your dollar hasn't been mailed yet, won't you please send it off now? Every day you delay is another day of anxiety for a girl who wonders whether she will—or won't—get a chance to live again.

Bill

HEP FARMER

This one is probably old, but it's new to me.

It's about the midget who is invited to a masquerade party and dresses as Sir Launcelot, complete with paper armor, spear, etc. For his steed he finds himself too small for a horse, so he rides a St. Bernard

En route to the party, he's caught in a terrific storm, and stops at a farmhouse to ask for shelter. Surveying the situation at a glance, the farmer says:

"Come right in. I couldn't turn away a knight on a dog like this."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Pretty Maltese cat, good mouser, housebroken, fond of children." (Twining 8300, Extension 236.)

IT'S FOR ME, BOSS

Here's one more sidelight on President Truman's homecoming parade.

As Federal Works Administrator Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming rode along in his official car behind the President, quite a cheer went up when the 15th st. turn was reached.

At first the applause appeared to be for General Fleming. But it later developed that the spectators were cheering for his chauffeur, Vernon Young.

It seems that Vernon had his own private claque for the occasion. So General Fleming smiled, sat back, and relaxed.

THEY WON'T BE THROUGH TILL FIFTY-TWO

Just when I thought that the election comment was finally finished, a friend called up to chirp:

"The Republicans certainly are good losers, aren't they? But of course, they've had so much practice at it lately."

Then came a little jingle from Patsy Johnson of 629 South Fillmore st., Arlington, Va., who adds the almost superfluous note: "I'm an Irish Democrat." Patsy rhymes:

Humpty Dewey sat on a wall;
Humpty Dewey had a great fall.
All Dewey's elephants, and all of his men
Couldn't stop Harry from winning again.

BE INDEPENDENT; VOTE FOR US

Mrs. Walter H. Wallace (no relation to Henry) of 711 14th st., Alexandria, Va., turns in one more election note that's worth recording.

Mrs. Wallace reports that on election day a sound truck toured Alexandria streets, and a woman's voice blared the message:

"Don't let anybody tell you how to vote. Go to the polls and vote a straight Democratic ticket. Don't let anybody tell you how to vote."

Merry-Go-Round

Rep. Thomas Reminded of Trial Rights

By Drew Pearson

Memo to Congressman J. Parnell Thomas, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee:

Although this column first exposed your un-American activity in taking salary kickbacks from employes, this is not written in a desire to gloat over your indictment; but rather to point out some of the great privileges of being American which all of us do not appreciate. On the basis of your previous behavior, you appear to be one who fails in that appreciation.

Thomas

For instance, when you later go on trial before a jury of your peers, no inference can be drawn from the fact that last week before a grand jury you refused to testify because you might incriminate yourself.

Scores of witnesses before your own committee have been berated because they refused to testify for the same reason. But the judge, giving you the full privilege of your American citizenship, will instruct the jury to disregard your previous refusal to testify.

Furthermore, even after your indictment this week, you are presumed to be innocent until trial by jury finds you guilty. That is your privilege as an American—a privilege you have denied to many others whom you tried before the bar of congressional public opinion. Even when you go to trial you can still refuse to testify and no inference can be drawn from that refusal. The judge will specifically instruct the jury that that is your privilege as an American.

Your Privilege

During your trial, furthermore, the Government prosecutor cannot and will not bring up any irrelevant facts that might prejudice the jury against you. He cannot bring out the fact that you changed your name from Feeney, though you have badgered witnesses before your committee who changed their names.

Nor can the prosecutor bring out any of your ungentlemanly behavior when traveling between Washington and New Jersey. Unlike some of the hearings before your own committee, you will be tried strictly on the charges brought against you—namely, did you receive salary kickbacks or not?

Furthermore, it will be your privilege as an American to be represented by counsel. You can consult with him at any time you wish. He will be constantly at your side as you face the judge and jury. If you should not be able to afford counsel, the judge will appoint a lawyer to represent you at no expense to yourself. You have denied committee witnesses the right to consult with counsel as they testified, but when you go on trial the judge will make sure that this American right is yours.

Those, Mr. Thomas, are some of the privileges of being American. They have been won by your ancestors and mine over many years of battling for the rights of man. And many millions of Americans would fight now to see that they are not torn down, would even fight to make sure you get their full benefit — even though you denied them to others.

I hope you will ponder this, and that your colleagues in the new Congress will make the future Un-American Activities Committee one which will proudly perform its job of making democracy live.

Note—A good part of the Nation will be watching new Speaker Sam Rayburn and his appointments to the new Un-American Activities Committee. A great public servant, Sam sometimes leans toward close cronies instead of statesmen when it comes to making committee appointments.

Election Aftermaths

An investigation of the Gallup, Roger and Crossley polls will be asked at the next session of Congress . . . Foreign Minister Evatt of Australia, president of the United Nations, was one of the few diplomats who made money betting on Truman . . . Only 96 hours before the election, President Truman privately wasn't so sure of the results. Talking to a friend in New York, he said, "I guess I'm licked. But it's worth the fight. At least, the people will know some of the issues. When this is over I'm going back to Missouri and run for Congress again" . . . Henry Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor will meet in Chicago to plan the future of the Progressive Party. They now want Truman to send Wallace on a peace mission to Moscow.

Marshall's Worries

Secretary of State Marshall is privately most unhappy over the progress of military operations against the Communists in Greece. He discovered on his recent trip that, despite millions of United States dollars poured into Greece, there are now more rebels than ever there.

Marshall blames part of this on the United States Army officers advising the Greek Army.
